Hypocrisy in action, Brian. :-)

Heil belongs to the cute coterie of elite morsemen extras. As such he thinks he has "federal authorization" to do whatever he pleases anywhere. :-)

No sweat, Brian, it's business as usual with the elite, smug, arrogant, and oh-so-"superior" extras... :-)

Their dictum is "Morsemen are NEVER at fault, ever!"

Really BAD public relations for US amateur radio.

Who is "K4YZ?"

Why can't you use this individual's NAME?

After all, you tacitly condone his conduct in this newsgroup.
You must be "good buddies" in the treehouse, both of you being amateur extra morsemen.

Tsk, BAD public relations for US amateur radio.

"Blown back?" :-) Tsk, tsk, I've been in here since before the world's greatest DXer was here, back when he WAS DX (paid for by the US taxpayer). :-)

>Brian is guilty of the same technique.

Brian got "dishes?" I'll have to ask him. Maybe we can compare the cooking up of ersatz "food" by all the extra super-special morsemen. [overcooked by them, as usual]

> As for Mark, his posting record speaks >for itself. He is the group Myna bird.

Tsk. No sooner had you blown back into this newsgroup when you stated with the cutesy names.

But, you hypocritically rationalize that as "approved" and
"condoned" since you are an extra super-special morseman.

>> YOU are not of the FCC, not an official thereof...
>No, I am not. You just stated who regulates U.S. amateur radio.
>You are not one who does.

True. But YOU pretend to be the RULER (by some posturing and preening and smug superiority) of it, the one who "approves" and "disapproves" of conduct. :-)

>... Nobody has given more commands or invited more >people to leave than Len Anderson.

Who is this "Len Anderson"? How did you arrive at the numbers of "leave commands?" Did you check with the person who has the callsign N2EY? Remember, only HIS numbers are the "correct" ones. :-)

>Well, Foghorn, you told you what to do.

Hypocrisy in action. It is "approved" for extra super-special morsemen to use any words they see fit, but NOT good conduct for NON-morsemen to do the same. Tsk, tsk.

>You can capitalize words and stomp your tired old feet all day long.

Tsk. CAPITALIZING words needs to be done in some cases to get through to the tired, closed-mind morsemen who cannot comprehend anyone having opinions other than morsemen's imaginings of glory.

Sometimes there's no other recourse but to use a 2x4 to bang on the heads of 1x2s. :-)

>As >long as I'm able to continue enjoying amateur radio and you stand on the >outside, pouting, life is pretty good, Len. Have a nice day.

Tsk, tsk. All I'm doing is advocating the elimination of the morse code test for US amateur radio licensing...for the benefit of anyone who might want to enjoy the HOBBY of amateur radio.

While you thought you were high up in some kind of amateur morse treehouse, I was way up in the big REAL radio high-rise some distance away, much higher up and communicating with many more humans.

Enjoy your ham radio. We all see you have lots of pickles to go with that ham. [the pickel dill is making your face and words all puckered?] Bon apetit.

My day is dandy. I have some free time to consider more about the retrograde attitudes of olde-tyme elite morsemen who wish to keep US amateur radio forever in the standards and practices of Their youth. That without thinking that Their youth is long gone. Yet they posture and preen about their (self-described) greatness without realizing that they are simply imagining things.

>> I am a citizen of the United States of America.
>What'd I just write? Your citizenship is acknowledged.

Amazing! Heil actually "conceded" that I was correct!

Now, if only the person known as "N2EY" can concede to my statements being right, it would be a cause for celebration! :-)

>You commented to the FCC. Happy now?

No. The FCC has taken NO VISIBLE ACTION on the NPRM of last year.

>> ... I got INTO radio in 1953.
>You keep flipping the channel, OM. You wrote "AMATEUR" RADIO above.

No, I wrote just "radio."

>Now you've switched to the generic "radio".

"Generic?" :-)

You mean to say that the ARRL and Hiram Percy Maxim did NOT INVENT all radio? :-)

>You've never gotten into "AMATEUR radio".

Tsk. Sorry Old Man (from the "CW" abbreviation of "OM" approved by all extra super-special morsemen), but I've designed and built radios of my own as a HOBBYIST. That HOBBY activity included buying and converting two surplus ARC-5 HF stations back in 1947, then selling-trading those to others. Good introduction to radio technology as a teenager.

OH! You must mean FEDERALLY LICENSED "amateur" radio!
I keep forgetting that you keep forgetting adjectives whenever you write that. My bad.

>It looks as if you have your wish.

"Wish?!?" No "wish," senior, er senor. Turned out to be both intellectually stimulating, interesting (not to mention financially rewarding - without subsidy from the US taxpayer) to be a professional in radio-electronics.

>You needn't worry about amateur radio.

No "worries," senor Gordo, er HEIL. My advocacy is just a bit of campaigning to both modernize US amateur radio regulations and to enable more US citizens to enter and enjoy that HOBBY. [it IS a hobby despite no specific use of that word by the FCC in Title 47 C.F.R.] [neither does the FCC use the word "ham" in Title 47]

I am not in the least "worried." YOU seem to be worried since you spend so much time in here trying to denigrate and defame all no-code-test advocates. YOU have the "superior" license, why don't you USE that instead of making all the smug, arrogant stuff against others in here?

>Feel free to appoint yourself advocate for something-or-other in >professional radio.

I do that also. I AM a Life Member of the IEEE (Institute for Electrical and Electronic Engineers, a professional association with 397 thousand members worldwide). I stay aware and informed of the much larger electronics industry activity that is happening now.

>> I've had a decades-long interest in RADIO and ELECTRONICS.
>That isn't what you wrote. You used the words "amateur radio".

"Amateur radio" is a small subset of the larger ("generic?") activity of ELECTRONICS.

"Amateur radio" is not restricted to just being federally licensed as a US radio amateur (complete with a pretty certificate suitable for framing) or the transmission of EM energy on allocated amateur bands. "Amateur" means
"without pecuniary interest." Non-professional. The definition is semantically equivalent to a HOBBY, an avocation.

>You've limited yourself by not including "amateurism". You're a victim >of inertia.

"Inertia?!?" We are ALL subject to Isaac Newton's laws.
[like it or not...:-)]

Are you having another out-of-body experience? Tsk, tsk.

"Out of body experiences" do not follow Newton's laws.

Tsk, MILLIONS have seen and enjoyed it. Lots of subtle humor in it.

However, I can understand how elitist super-special morsemen with smug, arrogant attitudes would not take to enjoying much except putting down the no-code-test advocates. Some of those elitists prefer "Monty Python's Flying Circus." :-)

>You don't give orders here, Len.

>On the other hand, you don't see your own actions as selfish and you >don't see that is possible that you are wrong.

Tsk, the elitist super-special morsemen amateurs keep telling me "I'm wrong" all the time... :-)

>You've shown no tolerance for those whose views is opposite your own.

Tsk, a typical comment from an elitist super-special extra amateur morseman: Not favoring their personal desires is defined by them as "intolerant!" :-)

>You've claimed in the past to only be here for civil debate.

NAH...I've desired civil debate...but never got it from day one in here. :-)

The elitist super-special extra morsemen amateurs were never about to accept the inevitable of elimination of the amateur radio code test! :-)

>Your record shows otherwise.

My "record?!?" :-) I've never "cut" a record, taped anything, or produced a CD on that subject. :-)

>Your words are disingenuous.

Wow! You've been at the dictionary again!

>There has been no evidence that you accept anything they say.

Tsk. Go back to the dictionary again. "Acceptance" is not synonymous with Blind Obedience. ;-)

[are you "homonym-phobic?" :-)]

>> I don't "play" with arrogant retrogrades intent on being

You should. It is known as the US 'ARS.' You ARE a member.

"Win converts?!?" Is this some sort of evangelical moment for you? A religious experience? :-)

My bad. I forgot this newsgroup was created for the extra super-special amateur morsemen to have their last gasp in putting down all the no-code-test advocates.

Well, I suppose you think God spoke to you. Wheels have spokes. You fancy yourself a "wheel." "Wheels" think they can roll all over their opponents...but ONLY on smooth highways of their own choosing. [imagination of the extra super-special amateur morsemen is astounding]

else?

Tsk, that "product" failed in fabrication!

"Ares?" :-)

So, you and the person formerly known as "N2EY" consider yourself "expert" on Los Angeles ordinances concerning residential areas and homes?

No doubt you both do, deep into the fantasy of extra super-special morsemen KNOWING EVERYTHING because they once passed a telegraphy test. :-)

Okay, go there and whatever newsgroup covers real estate.
I'm sure you will be welcomed with open arms, being the "expert" on matters 3000 miles from where you live. :-)

It's not nice to describe the person formerly known as "N2EY" in that way. You should apologize to him.

Your definition lennieboy, not the FCC's. Nowhere does the FCC define Amateur Radio as a hobby. Please quote me where the FCC defines Amateur Radio as a "hobby".

Nowhere does the FCC define Amateur Radio as a hobby.

Try not to be so stupid, I know that's a real chore for you. Time to take your meds and lay down for a while.

And the Citizens Band Radio Service was initially intended to be just that, a SERVICE, not a hobby band. It was to be for business use only, it was the CBers who turned it into a "hobby" sewer pit.

Wirepullers? The ARRL isn't an electrician's union, Len. Carl wasn't

And yet the amateur service was growing by leaps and bounds. There were 300,000 or so licensees in the U.S. when I became licensed. Today there are well over 600,000. U.S. amateur radio has grown at a rate higher than U.S. population growth.

Why, you've just fabricated again, Leonard. As I've stated on a number

Who is this "Steve?"

Heil has 'chosen' to tacitly condone Steven James Robeson's very numerous postings alleging all sorts of fictitious "crimes" supposedly done by others.

What will be Heil's next rationalization "excuse?" That he was "only following orders?"

Did you write that "reply" in invisible ink? You said NOTHING about Robeson's conduct in here.

You tacitly condoned his postings by NOT saying anything.

No such answer visible.

All you did was waltz around the subject, saying you "answered it" but never did. You misdirected into a long mistaken "definition" of diplomacy.

>I've done no such thing.

You have tacitly condoned Robeson's conduct in here by NOT saying anything for or against it.

On the other hand you are constantly trying to berate and attack those who disagree with your view of morse code testing.

Robeson's filthy falsehoods have been going on for YEARS and you've ignored them in favor of your attacks and denigrations of others. Google archives are full of the history of it.

>You're not only a horse's patoot, you're a baldfaced liar, Len.

"Baldfaced?" Shall we all go without shaving to show your version of "honesty?" Ridiculous.

Using schoolkid insults seems to be your metier when trying to get out of answering something directly.

>> Do you think that Brian Burke MOLESTS boy scouts?

>Am I supposed to do this on your order, old soldier?

You can ignore it as usual and then hypocritically attack, insult, demean others in your own schoolboy manner, patoot.

>I've made no sexual comment on Brian and boy scouts.

That is in the TITLE of this sub-thread.

Do you agree with the charge as leveled against Brian Burke by Steven Robeson? Answer yes or no.

>There is no "Robesin". Use the man's name, Len. He isn't "Robesin" or

There is no "Foghorn Lenhorn" or "Major Hoople" either, yet you freely use such cutesy names with impunity. HYPOCRITE.

To be quite honest, I don't often read his posts. When he and Mark get into a contest, I find that I often have better things to do. I don't read Mark's posts at all unless someone responds to one of them.

> You're as two-faced as a person can be.

That's simply not right, Brian. You often pop into the group for no other purpose than to snipe at Steve or to take a poke at me. Then you sit back and take objection if something similar is tossed back your way. If you're swinging at Steve and he calls you "Brain", what do you think I should be doing about it? What action should I take? Should I place a quarter page ad in QST, condemning his action? Most of the time I don't give a rat's patoot about it.

> Get over yourself.

I have no reason to do so. I'm lquite comfortable in my skin.

Now that's interesting. Is Markie admitting that Toad is going to get a NAL (Notice of Apparent Liability)? Or did our resident spelling ace actually mean to write, "why would a fed show up for anal?"

"For anal" is the reason Markie would show up at Toad's place. A little Freudian slip there, Markie?

But "a fed" would show up at Toad's place "for anal" in the sense that "a fed" is going to shove that NAL up Toad's ass sideways.

"radio MECHANIC?!?" That's an old Brit term actually used in the RAF in the 1940s. Major Dud prolly read that in old old radio books... :-)

>There

Ooooo...little kiddies got years of experience in "REAL" radio?!? Robesin must be reading the "Harry Potter" novels again. :-)

Poor stebie has dipped too far into the Sharps for his latest hit. He is acting insane. Nutso. Meshugge.

ITT Ground-Aerospace (Fort Wayne, IN) makes the SINgle Channel Ground Air Radio System. They are General Dynamics Land Div.
(now dissolved, in Boca Raton, FL) made over 250,000 of them.
It is the standard small-unit 30-88 MHz transceiver in the US military land forces now. [largest production quantity of any military radio] ITT and Harris have developed an HT that is compatible with SINCGARS and that is in use in Iraq today.

"Amatuer?" :-)

There's no nomenclature/designation of "J-38" except as a jack reference designation on individual equipment. Any KEYER would have a "KY" prefix followed by a number. [like the jelly]
As far as I know, the only manual radiotelegraphy keys left in the military are in storage somewhere (maybe not). Today's KEYER designations refer to peripheral devices such as modems and encryption devices. The SINCGARS radio family does not have any radiotelegraph key connection jacks; they do have a connection for carrier control from a remote base plus lines for the voice and data input/output.

> Oh...yes....Lennie NEVER carried a SINCGARS radio. Not once.

Actually, THREE of them. In 1989. Of the first models.
As a civilian doing some field testing on them. Didn't have to "carry" any on my back, though. :-)

> Lennie is NOT a licensed Aviator.

Never claimed I was. :-) Robesin thinks this is necessary for an amateur radio license? :-)

Nursie Stevie pretends he is Howard Hughes and builds a spruce goose? Or gets a goose from a piece of spruce?

>Yet Lennie's presumed to tell >those of us who are all about aerial navigation, aircraft types, >missions, functions, etc.

Not a problem. Civilian avionics systems, communications and radionavigation systems are radio-electronics technology NOT requiring any pilot's license to work in. :-)

Does Nursie Stevie need VOR, DME, TACAN, Transponders, Marker Beacons, Localizers, Glideslopes explained to him?

>He WAS a student pilot some time in the late >50's or early 60's, but never managed to solo or complete the program,

"Program?!?" Private, paid-for-out-of-own-pocket expenses
(at Skyways, Van Nuys Airport, CA) was a "program?"

CO$T and time didn't permit continuation. A house purchase came first. Actually a wise decision to an 'ultimatum.' :-)
I do have my FAA written exam scorecard digitized for proof.

>Merely one of many things that Lennie started but never finished.

I had some lasagna the other night that I didn't finish.
Does that count? :-)

>Lennie's sole present day

I DO?!? Tsk, I can't get the LAX frequencies from this location all the time. BUR and VNY okay. BUR is only a mile and a half away. [BURbank or Bob Hope Airport, VNY = Van Nuys Airport, both tower-controlled, therefore radio comms required]

"Scanner?!?" What scanner? I've got a PLL-tuned fixed frequency receiver for that stuff if I bothered with it. Designed and built it myself. Had - in ancient times - a little Regency table model receiver for that, but it wasn't sensitive, so I made my own design. Still could use an outside antenna, though.

Tsk, another zealot. :-)

Poor stebie has so MANY "loads"...were the alimony payments from the first marriage so bad?

Well, it's no wonder that Robesin doesn't have any personal records/documents he could scan and send to folks about most of his life (he's never done that). He was "too busy" with his "loads!" :-)

Lock and loads, lock and loads...

>Seems
>that by claimig such greater noble endevaors, he's immunized himself >from "why haven't YOU done it" inquiries. None of which, of course,

"Noble endevaors?" :-)

"Immunized?" Of course...getting through a 50-year career in radio-electronics required just a single hypodermic injection of smarts...everything was "easy!" :-)

Tell me why I "MUST" complete that Nobel-equivalent amateur test. My advocacy is only for eliminating the morse code test from US amateur radio licensing. I've said that over and over and over, yet "Steve and the Boys" plus Herr Robust and Mother S. insist I get it. <shrug>

> Lennie is NOT a licensed psychiatrist.

Never claimed to be one. :-)

Psychiatrists have to be Medical Doctors FIRST, then they can go into post-grad stuff for psychiatry. Nursie Stevie
NOT a REAL Medical Doctor...doesn't even play one on TV.

> Yet Lennie presumes to >make diagnosis of mental aberations, define personality types, and >otherwise attempt to appear as though he has a "grip" on the human >psyche.

No problem there. Steven James Robeson (the autist formerly known as "K4YZ") acts irrationally in here, states LIES, cannot provide proof of his own claims. He be NUTS.

Undergraduate (that's college talk, nursie) requirements in California in the 1960s required two semesters of PSYCHOLOGY. That and life experience is enough to tell who is rational and who is irrational.

I don't/didn't need my wife to advise me you are so irrational and affected that you might swing over to insanity at any moment. One more angry burst and that big vein or artery goes POP...nursie stevie becomes just another statistic, not a vital one at that. Tsk.

> Most of this was information gleaned from his wife's >correspondence course texts that are stored in some storage facility
>"up north" (the same place where his "expired" GROL is stored, no >doubt).

Tsk, there goes the nutcase again. [sigh...]

My Commercial radio licenses are stored in a safety deposit box near the southern house. Those are also digitized along with several other documents. My wife's POST-GRADUATE DIPLOMAS...from University of Illinois and University of Wisconsin...(formal class attendence required both places) are stored up in the northern house. Neither University offers "correspondence school" classes in Education or Social Work. My wife was in private practice in Illinois and Washington as a Social Work Counselor and in Illinois government practice as a Social Worker, both in the field and with a hospital in Springfield, IL. Those states don't accept "correspondence schooling" certificates for state-licensed practice.

None of us here know what Nursie Steve has for "certificates" or "diplomas" or from where. Nursie Steve's name appears in the Tennessee state listing of nurses. We don't know where Stevie has worked in nursing...if he is still working.

Of course, the BIG question that Nursie Steve has never answered is: "Where is the PROOF that Nursie Stevie had ever served in the USMC at any rank?" Poor baby must be carrying such a "load" he couldn't go down to a local office supply store or drugstore or supermarket to make electronic copies of any of that. Not a single snapshot of the Last Action Hero in any of his alleged 18 years in the Corps. "Too much of a 'load!'"

> Lennie is NOT a member of any public service organization, paid OR >volunteer.

Incorrect. They don't involve radio per se.

> However Lennie's gone to great lengths to presume to tell >others who ARE in such organizations how meaningless thier services are >and how wasted thier efforts are.

"thier?" :-)

How long is a "great length?" A light-year is pretty long.

An "angry inch" is very short, Hedvig.

> Lennie's even presumed to express an >INFORMED opinion of these organizations dating back to his pre-teen >years.

I did? :-) When was my "pre-teen" time, Nursie Stevie?

Did you mean "Air Raid Wardens" during WW2? Useless inland a thousand miles from any coast back then. I was in "pre-teen" years and my father-in-law-to-be was an air raid warden then.

>This is most true of persons who are in volunteer roles.
>According to Lennie, only those persons who receive monetary >compensation for thier services are "true" emergency or "Public >Service" providers.

"thier?" :-)

Hokay, where are all the "volunteer" ambulances around here? All of them cost $600 a round trip, minimum.

REAL medical doctors still require monetary compensation for their services if one has any money at all.

> That a great proportion of such services are >rendered by volunteers in the United States falls on deaf ears to >"Show-Me-The-Money Anderson".

How MUCH is "a great proportion?" Give us some numbers.

Oh, and I HAVE the money. You got no money? Awww...well, you just find a "volunteer" who can put you through pre-Med, Residency, etc. to become a REAL Medical Doctor.
Then you too can get the money. :-)

> Lennie is NOT currently a member of the Armed Forces, their >auxiliaries or any state defense or homeland security program.

Right. :-) Nursie Stevie is a "major" in the CAP, heroically defending his state against terrorists!!!

BWAAAAHAHAHAHAHAHAHA!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

>He DID
>serve ONE voluntary tour of duty in the US Army, ending in 1956, 1952 to 1960. Eight years. Try to get your numbers down.

> Of course that ONE tour of >duty over 50 years ago seems to have imbued him with an all-knowing

Tsk. I've been on more military bases as a civilian than Nursie Stevie has claimed...while working on DoD contracts.

>He's even gone
>as far as to presume to discuss the aircraft types and missions flown >by the auxiliary of the Air Force, yet even that data was dated by

I've commented on "missions flown" by the "auxiliary" of the USAF? Isn't that some kind of Homeland Security top secret? :-)

Hokay, how many hardpoints have your little Cessnas or Pipers or Taylorcrafts or whatever your CAP flies? What is your ordinance load? Where is your airial gunnery practice location? Nursie Stevie fly Top Gun missions at Nellis? :-)

Wow, fabulous tales Nursie Stevie got! Sort of like the monthly meetings of the TN STATE Guard where the good ol' boys get to put on cammies and play sojer!

>... All tales no doubt inspired by Clancy novels. His tales also

Tom Clancy's first novel was "The Hunt for Red October," Naval Institute Press, 1984. Good writing, good suspense, good reading. Was made into a major motion picture starring Sean Connery and Alec Baldwin. It was published 24 years AFTER I received my Honorable Discharge from the United States Army.

Nursie Stevie got an Honorable Discharge? [or just a discharge?] Got it digitized for sending as an e-mail attachment?

Tsk, volunteers to the US Army were sworn in; "induction" was for draftees. We volunteered and got different Army Serial Numbers to that ID, principally the two-letter prefix: 'RA' for volunteer, standing for "Regular Army;" 'US' for army of the United States, draftees; 'NG' for activated National Guard (the real ones, not the "state guard". Mine: RA 16 408 336.

"Remotely" patriotic applies to UNIFORMED members of the military. :-)

Oh, my, what a fabrication THERE! :-)

"Rosie the Riveter" was a construct of WW2 PR, to symbolize all the women who worked on the assembly lines then. That name was included in a semi-popular song of the time. No doubt modeled on real counterparts, the name was fictitious.

Clarence "Kelly" Johnson was the man in charge of Lockheed Aircraft's "Skunk Works" located at (what is now) BUR, a single very large hangar having office and assembly space, located at the Winona Avenue entrance off Hollywood Way. That entrance is still there but the "Skunk Works" hangar was razed years ago, larger space at Palmdale (Air Force Plant 42), CA (north of Burbank but south of Edwards AFB), acquired and shared with Northrup (now). Kelly Johnson was 23 when he joined Lockheed in 1933 to work on the first Lockheed Electra (twin-engine piston-prop). Ben Rich took over the old Skunk Works after Johnson's stroke (after the SR-71 first flight) that forced Johnson to retire. Rich was project leader on the SR-71 program and headed the F-117 development at Lockheed. Lockheed Aircraft moved OUT of the Burbank, CA, area entirely before 1990 and the last Lockheed buildings at the airport and nearby were razed about 2002. I have a nice aerial photo of BUR showing the crossed runways still there and the "Skunk Works" hangar...it is digitized. :-)

Robert Oppenheimer was the civilian half of the leadership of the Manhattan Project. Gen. Leslie Groves was the military part of the leadership. There are all sorts of information available on the man and the Manhattan Project for those that are interested.

I salute all of them, plus those that hysterical historian nursie never mentioned.

Nursie Stevie been riveting? Work at Lockheed? Involved in the Manhattan Project? Ever been to Manhattan? Nursie Stevie drink too many manhattans? :-)

> He (Lennie) often brags about the make-and-model radios he >did it.

"Brags?" Just DID it. Remember the famous misquote in here? "It ain't braggin if ya done it" (attributed to baseball player Dizzy Dean)

Clothing makes a radio design? :-)

Tsk, Nursie Stevie need only go to the following site:

http://sujan.hallikainen.org/BroadcastHistory and scroll down to click on "Military Radio." On that page is three uploads I made to Hal's site on what the Army's long-distance communications were circa 1962 plus a look inside the development and design of the FIRST walkie-talkie, the SCR-300. Motorola's Chicago plant designers did the first walkie-talkie -and- the first handie-talkie at the request of the Department of the Army (military folks wearing uniforms).

Nursie Stevie tried a previous fabrication about "Motorola" saying "it didn't exist during WW2!" as if mentioning that were a heinous 'crime!" The founders, the Galvin brothers, used their names for the corporate identity but ALSO used the trademark "Motorola" during and before WW2.

"Motorola" changed the corporate name after WW2 and the tradename has always been associated with that company.

> Lennie's NOT a healthcare provider at ANY level, yet he's presumed

Several others in here HAVE to bring that up at least

Don't sweat it, Mark. Nursie Stevie is off on a HATE tear again.

Maybe he thinks we are all waiting in terror for the "authorities" to come pick us up on his single telephone call to them?

BWAAAAAHAHAHAHAHHAH!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

He be meshugeneh fakakta vantz.

>It's Not a Code, no code problem, it's a generational problem!

Why are you younger generation kids so retrograde compared to my, OLDER generation, Freddie? :-)

Is your generation's generator turning over? Not much coherent stuff being generated there...

>In the past week, the articles that seemed to get the most play on ham sites >were the Southern Border Volunteers and the lack of brotherhood in ham >radio.

Oh, wow! South Carolina is in danger of being over-run by Mexicans?!? Losing the "brotherhood?" Have you tried recruiting a "sisterhood?" :-)

Freddie, I live in southern California. California borders Mexico. Guess what, that border is only around 3 hours drive from me. :-)

>Ham radio went to hell when Dick Bash got involved with his published "cheat >sheets".

Really?!? I thought it "went" when you hams were allowed to use VOICE! :-)

Or maybe when SPARK was outlawed?

>This piece is from the prospective of a ham with over 50 years spewing RF

You forgot BAREFOOT, Freddie. :-)

So, you "spewed RF throughout the world" over 50 years ago?

Unidirectional? I started in February 1953, HF beam patterns pointed in many, specific directions...thanks to the United States Army Signal Corps. :-)

>Just as sure as these words are on your screen, you too will someday be an >old fart just like me.

Poor baby, born in 1939. Tsk, tsk, tsk. That makes me 6 or 7 years OLDER than you, Freddie.

>As you enter the dotage of your life, health concerns >and the condition of your aged friends, becomes more of a concern. We, like >you, used to talk about more contemporary subjects.

WTF? Freddie boy, just WHO are you posting to? [see the bottom since you didn't format this for proper quoting and replies]

>Unlike a number of you, >we allowed the older folks to have their conversations without ridicule. It >is called respect, and is a two way street.

Freddie, you are demanding ONE WAY driving on a two-way street.
When did you last take a driving test? :-)

> Realize that when I was a newby,
>I suffered the same as you at the hands of the old farts.

Poor baby. Snif, snif.

>They believed that >for you to enter their group, you should first show respect and learn to >snatch the pebble from their hand.

You mean DRINK in their hand, don't you? :-)

WHY did "your elders" have PEBBLES in their hand?

>None of you started in your working life as the CEO of the company, yet many >of today's generation feel that a newly minted license conveys total >knowledge. What you have is a license to learn, take advantage of it and the >brotherhood will naturally follow.

Sigh...Freddie, you may be too far gone in your dotage? :-)

NOT in THIS group in this Din of Inequity, Freddie. Ain't NO "respect" unless one is a devout morseman worshipping at the Church of St. Hiram.

>If we all took the time to show each other respect, and be less quick to >judge, not only would ham radio be better, but our lives as well.

Whoopee, a MAXIM! You ARE in the congregation of the Church of St. Hiram!

I am supposed to "respect" you for your 'age?' :-)

So, does your quaint little pebble-filled maxim work the OTHER way, Freddie?

When are YOU going to show respect for those OLDER than YOU? :-)

[watch out, I have lots of 'pebbles'...:-)]

You are scared of being 'outed' because you are a pathological abuser of usenet, and people rightly despise you for it. You're afraid of being reported to the authorities or, better, visited by a couple of guys with baseball bats. Other people don't have this obsessive fear. Ward Hardman himself has posted plenty of personal information - nothing that anyone else added was hidden in any way. You're so fucking scared you've built up this whole sick mythology about different categories of bad dudes who 'out' scum like you.

"Meanwhile you are the ugliest pigfucker in the universe. You are the coward without ethics. You call me a 'newbie' - ha! what an asshole you are. Those who want to remain anonymous do so. There is absolutely no way you could identify me, not unless you had the sort of subpoena power that only gets turned on for big-time terrorists. That's because I chose to be anonymous. Some people don't. Only really stupid dicks like you choose the sort of semi-anonymity which leaves you in constant fear.

Anybody know what the last sentence means?

The second sentence is exactly what most of us figured was the attitude of the operator all along, so it comes as no surprise. The station's slogan should really be:

"CITIZNS"??

If you meant "citizens", Len, please note that the FCC also accepts comments from non-citizens and organizations. IOW, all interested parties.

> The FCC
> then does some review and analysis of all Comments and Which is not "a democratic process". The majority or plurality of comments do not necessarily get their way. The decision-makers at FCC are not elected, either.

The closest FCC actions come to being "a democratic process" is that the folks who appoint the top bureaucrats at FCC are elected.

> That is HARDLY a "whim," sweetums.

It can be. If FCC decides something is important, they make it happen pretty fast and comments may not have much effect. When Papa Bush wanted to do a favor for a now-dead King, we got medical waivers for some license exams. The commentary didn't have any effect.

Or when the VE system replaced the use of FCC examiners, thereby saving money, there wasn't even an NPRM IIRC. No comments, just "here's your new system". There were protests but they had no effect.

What's a "ham homie", Len?

It's fine with me that any interested party can petition or comment - citizen or not. That also means that anyone who does petition or comment must accept discussion of what they propose.

How do you know I don't have friends in the LAX area, Len?

Guess what - I've been there.

And the fact of the matter is that real estate isn't all that different here. Sure, there are regional and local differences - the real estate here doesn't often shake the way it does in CA, and the snowfall here is somewhat more than in SoCal, but the basics are all the same.

Nope. Just observing what goes on.

Sure you are. You don't want the neighborhood to change. It was built as single-family-detached houses and you didn't want any other kind of house built there. You wanted the law to keep things as they were in the early 1960s.

So?

Zillow says your house has 1980 square feet of floor space. Heck, your lot isn't 21,000 sf - it's less than 12,000 sf. The houses and lots around you are similar.

Look it up on zillow.com - nice satellite pictures. Zillow information is often a bit off, but I doubt by more than a factor of 10.

Modern homes are hardly comparable to early homes. In fact the homes being built today are quite different than those of a few decades ago.
Many, many changes in home construction in that time period.

Ah, no, it isn't, Len.

The subject line was changed to "Real Estate Follies". You changed it again, I changed it back.

This discussion is right on the subject. I think that bothers you.

What have I written on this real estate subject that is not accurate?

It's simple, Len. You did not want the zoning changed, because that could mean "APARTMENTS" in your neighborhood!

You wanted your neighborhood to stay as it was built 40+ years ago -
preferably with no new houses at all.

The point is that you don't want to say whether the "no changes"
position was agreed to by the majority.

It's a good and valid analogy. That's why you're upset.

> Okay, so you must LIVE in "the bands" with your little

So you don't know about radiotelegraphy - you're not involved. Not a participant. No investment, no stake, an outsider. But you claim to know what is best for those who are involved and are participants.

> Not only have you mixed metaphors but you have mixed > your fruit cocktail of "analogies" very, very badly.

Not at all.

In fact, the analogy fits really well. Neighborhoods are communities - and so is amateur radio a community. You're not part of the amateur radio community, Len - you're on the outside, looking in. You're like someone who wants to change the zoning ordinances in someone else's community, but doesn't live there nor want to live there.

You'd be outraged if I were to support changes to the zoning ordinances for your neighborhood, because those changes would affect you much more than they would affect me. But you support changes to radio regulations that would affect me much more than they would affect you.

Yes.

That's essentially a hazing ritual to try to win acceptance from those already in the neighborhood.

You do resist progress and change, Len.

Actually, I do. 15 acres and a quarter million yards of earth moving isn't such a big job.

Better than listening to the sirens of emergency vehicles coming to deal with accidents caused by the lack of those beepers.

Do you not believe in safety regulations, Len?

Yup. The new houses were single-family-detached.

That's common during a housing boom. When the bubble breaks the situation will be different.

$400k buys a lot of house in some places and not much in others.

They're being built new in lots of places, Len. "This Old House" renovated one in Washington, DC, this season.

Try answering my question, Len.

How is that any different from those of us in amateur radio and who participate in it. who understand that a some regulations should change as little as possible?

The basic fact is that you don't want your neighborhood to change in ways you don't like, but you want the amateur radio neighborhood to change in ways the participants there don't like (such as age requirements).

If someone who was not a resident or prospective resident wanted to

Not at all. Only those in "adjacent areas". Not people who are not adjacent but who might want to "get into" your neighborhood.

Why is LA real estate "not my business"? I might want to move to Sun Valley someday. I've been involved in real estate for decades, too.

Yes - they're not radically different from the existing homes. They're not twins, duplexes, triplexes, condos, townhomes or apartments. The lot sizes aren't much different either. About the only big difference is they are in a walled community and are 2 story.

Are the walls to keep the old neighborhood out?

Doesn't answer the question, Len.

Why should radio amateurs not oppose the changes an outsider like you wants to force on us, when you opposed the changes an outsider tried to force on your neighborhood?

> The FCC is bound by law to listen to ALL interested citizens

Commentary only. And that's not the question.

> That includes the mobile radio "trailer park" you > describe "the bands" to be.

I don't describe the amateur bands as a trailer park. That's your definition.

I see them as a lovely, welcoming, diverse place to enjoy.

> If there is a nearby (not IN my > neighborhood) radio amateur causing RFI to me or my neighbors

If he is the cause of the RFI. Usually the RFI is caused by consumer electronics with insufficient rejection of incidental RF. Read Part 15 and see whose responsibility it is to cure such interference.

> If you don't like the EM spectrum where "you live" you have

And if you don't like your neighborhood, you can move.

But if the mateur radio neighborhood is destroyed by bad regulation changes, there's nowhere else to go.

> But you are restricted BY LAW to the little homie

So it's even more important not to change the radio regulations in ways that will "ruin the neighborhood".

So move if you don't like it.

Turning it off is like leaving the house.

Zillow prices your house lower than almost all of your neighbors' houses, Len. Look it up.

> Can you do

It's all about the money to you, isn't it, Len?

The fact is that there are some things money can't buy. Skill is one of them. Perhaps that's why you are so negative about skills that others have and you lack.

> Will I see you at the next Los Angeles City meeting

Just like you are a non-participant in amateur radio, Len.

Gee. Len, you sure do get upset when someone points out a simple, basic fact of your logic.

btw - in another posting you told folks to "end this thread" - which is simply another way of telling them to shut up. I guess you think freedom of speech is for you but not for those who disagree with you.

Yes, that's the point.

> The point is that ethical people behave ethically.

People who behave ethically at all times don't need safeguards.

No, I didn't.

And who defines what "ethics" are the right ones?

Was it ethical to appoint someone with no emergency management experience to head FEMA?

Was it ethical to give lucrative no-bid contracts to a company that used to be run by a top administrator who helped make the decision?

And that wasn't the real Mark Morgan, you clueless rube. The post was made through nntpserver.com, and the teranews headers were all faked.

Nevertheless, Mark Morgan is to be congratulated for earning the Golden Killfile Award. Oh, it's not as good as your Cocksucker of the Year award from NIM Busters, but Mark is working his way down. Next year, he'll take that position over for himself, and you will be history.

That site would be more convincing if it wasn't a come-on to use THEIR version

Okay, so this is retro on not on amateur radio, but let's review how Jimmy MANUFACTURES something out of nothing.

Jimmie say (residential zoning) = (amateur radio policy)!

Amazing.

Tell ya what, next time the Los Angeles government is going to act on any decision, YOU as a 20 WPM code-tested amateur extra will be notified as an EXPERT CONSULTANT on city and county political decisions.

That should satisfy your "I'm-a-knowitall-extra" imagination. [I doubt it will, though]

>It can be. If FCC decides something is important, they make it happen >pretty fast and comments may not have much effect. When Papa Bush

What does that have to do with Los Angeles Zoning Ordinances?

The FCC does NOT rule/decide/mitigate Los Angeles Zoning Ordinances.

Are you zoned out?

Get a hit from yer gud buddie Nursie Stevie?

Do the VEC rule/decide/mitigate Los Angeles Zoning

Los Angeles city/county affairs.

So have MILLIONS of others. LAX is one of the busiest you can get the party ball going by having a big lecture on Los Angeles Zoning Ordinances...

Yes, it does bother me. I thought this was an AMATEUR RADIO POLICY newsgroup. You think it is a LOS ANGELES GOVERNMENT newsgroup.

Google states that this is the AMATEUR RADIO POLICY newsgroup.

You say it is "different."

You persist in that delusion.

Either Google is wrong or Jimmie-knowitall is wrong.

But Jimmie is NEVER WRONG.

It is a "die-lemma." [Jimmy would rather die than give up his viewpoints on morsemanship]

>It's simple, Len. You did not want the zoning changed, because that >could mean "APARTMENTS" in your neighborhood!

Yes.

>You wanted your neighborhood to stay as it was built 40+ years ago -
>preferably with no new houses at all.

Hello? "We" (the neighborhood association) wanted the Zoning code to remain. I wrote that. Did you see it?

Now, whatinhell is all this fuss over Los Angeles Zoning Ordinances doing in an AMATEUR RADIO POLICY newsgroup?

>The point is that you don't want to say whether the "no changes"
>position was agreed to by the majority.

The "point" is that you are CONFUSED as to what this newsgroup is supposed to contain.

Talk to Google. Maybe they will change it for you.

>So you don't know about radiotelegraphy - you're not involved. Not a >participant. No investment, no stake, an outsider. But you claim to

So you don't know about Los Angeles codes and ordinances - you're not involved. Not a participant. No investment, no stake, an outsider. But you claim to know what is best for those involved and are participants.

Pssst, Jimmie...this is the AMATEUR RADIO POLICY newsgroup.
It is NOT about Los Angeles residence laws. Really.

>You'd be outraged if I were to support changes to the zoning ordinances >for your neighborhood, because those changes would affect you much more >than they would affect me.

Tsk, not "outraged." Annoyed. While I do NOT have the "authority" stated by Nursie Stevie to make a simple telephone call to "pick you up," a short call to one of several Los Angeles newspapers would start the process of making you look the interfering fool. The Los Angeles Times has over a million daily readers...thousands would see your foolish interfering acts and utterances (quoted with real ink on real paper) and be amused by such antics.
It's a good bet that the City Editor would be laughing so hard about it that he wouldn't send out a reporter to cover it...the comic strips are in another part of the Times.

> But you support changes to radio regulations >that would affect me much more than they would affect you.

So, we are supposed to understand that you constantly take the US amateur radio licensing exam manual morse code test?

Is that your point?

Tell you what...go to Google and see if they have a Los Angeles government affairs newsgroup. If there isn't any, then START one. In there you can talk all you want to on AMATEUR RADIO POLICY matters.

Sound okay with you?

>> Oh, dear, you are REALLY stuck in comparing lettuce with >> lava, aren't you? :-)
>Try answering my question, Len.

I could but it doesn't compute on my decryption machine.

This is the AMATEUR RADIO POLICY newsgroup.

It isn't a newsgroup for discussing zoning laws regarding residences.

>> >The amateur bands are a sort of home to us, not you.

Then GO HOME, Jimmie.

Or, at least, go to a newsgroup about the correct subject.

>Doesn't answer the question, Len.

? It didn't come up in the latest neighborhood association meeting, nor with our government councilmember. ?

Did you really have a "question"? I thought you were just stamping your feet in a tantrum...

>So move if you don't like it.

Why are you telling me what to do? :-)

Or are you telling me to "shut up?" :-)

Jimmie, you are getting more and more irrational in here.

[quit stamping your feet crying "I'm right! I'm right!"]

You are starting to resemble the fictional TV character
"Max Headroom." Good luck on finding a sponsor for your show...

Sigh, another "reality adventure" episode, character studies of the middle-aged morse mavens kvetching about possible loss of their rank, title, status, and privileges from being retrograde morsemen and forcing all newcomers to accept their old ideals.

Oh my! Poor Roger. Everybody is against him. He is an innocent and loving little cherub. People doctored tapes and sent them to the FCC.
The FCC monitors lied and set Roger up. Riley Hollingsworth has it in for Roger. He sent him enforcement letters and made him retest.
Internet Service Providers conspired to dump Roger for no reason at all.
That lady who runs the Moundsville ISP had the audacity to yank Roger's access just because he wrote a little filthy passage about her, thereby denying Roger his First Amendment rights. The local police locked him up on a whim and have repeatedly called on him for no reason whatever. The local ARES group shuns Roger. All of usenet views him as a pariah.

Life has been so unkind to you, Rog.

That's simply incorrect, UnWiseman. I explained to Len how diplomacy

Because of phishing, trojans, and other very smart crooks trying to get into my account, and also because of Paypal complaints that are legion, there is no way I would link up my main bank account with Paypal. When I sell something on ebay, I request payment by a money order, when I buy something on ebay I pay by money order. If the seller wants Paypal only, I move on to the next listing. I have noticed that more and more sellers are glad to accept money orders, especially individuals who are selling their own stuff. I have had no problems with Paypal but there are just too many really clever scammers working the internet. I maintain a tiny account in a different bank to handle fees: if I do get hit by a crook, or by Paypal, the loot would only be about $5.00. In addition, in Canada, interbank money transfers are safe and inexpensive.

Roger lays awake at night. He tosses from side to side, repeating endlessly, "Dave Heil....Stagger Lee....Dave Heil.......
Stagger Lee....Dave Heil......" Upon awakening, Roger then blames his sleepless night on Lloyd. One has to wonder just how many voices live in Roger's tortured brain.

One compelling reason to ONLY fund PayPal with a Credit Card that will charge-back unauthorized activity and to request a check if you have more than $20 in your account.
They cannot take what they don't have.

But this isn't stamp collecting or fly-tying. It isn't even soccer or la crosse.

This is amateur radio where lives are saved and we are everybody's comm back-up.

Don't you think we could get a little more participation?

2385. New Omega One party game: Pass the beer enema.

How they play it:

N9OGL administers a large beer enema to AB8MQ.

KB9RQZ has a hollow tube in his anus. Woger backs up, butt to butt with Markie and inserts the other end of the tube in his ass and passes the enema to Markie who removes his end of the tube, holding in the enema he just receive from Woger.

N0VFP now grabs and inserts the tube and Markie backs up to him and butt to butt he passes the enema to Lloydie.

Lloyd holds the enema in for a while then passes it back to woger using the above procedure. Then Toddie, Markie and Lloydie kneel down behind Woger and Woger gives them the golden brown shower and they all fall to the floor laughing to the music playing on Omega one.

When it's Markies turn, Todd likes to administer the enema to Markie like he's sending CW. Long and short bursts. Markie hates CW and it always pisses him off when Todd Does that.

A-yup. I notice it all.

How are we to "join" in an emergency when we cannot join in everday

I know you did notice but the rest of the boozos need it pointed out

I don't volonteer much myself becuase of Ham's Like Robeson and in a real emergency my dad health is my first concern as well as the BS
"courses" they want to you take these days

there is nobody that has never broken the law SC but in justice were involved he would have nothing to worry but in truth Politics is in the mix and he MIGHT have reason worry (truth has little to do with politics afterall)

Yes, you did.

Apparently, ONLY the BoD.

Should the Democrats eventually regain a majority in the House, or the Whitehouse, will they behave ethically, or as they've always behaved?

That's exactly what Pres. Clinton did in 1995 when he attacked Yugoslavia. Haliburton, no-bid, huge cost overruns. NO PROBLEM.

I think the ARRL courses are probably good, though I haven't actually seen them. Standardization of terms and procedures has to be a good thing. The Fed, State, and Local governments are standardizing on the FEMA NIMS/ICS protocol. If they want Fed money, that is.

Recall the thread where I asked if anyone here had actually taken any of the ARRL courses???

I think I'm going to sign up for the antenna modelling course this winter for an inside activity.

If turning acv into a smoking crater won't hurt you, why would you bother with retaliation? OTOH, if you do retaliate, I can only assume you're lying about that, which is extremely unsurprising.

Looney Maroon nominee for August 2006 Johnny D Wentzky foamed:
"You never asked someone who goes into areas of the internet that are only for adults who has an underage id somehow or another if they are a cop posing as an underage person online?
I guess lots of people just don't watch dateline or read stories much. Why don;t you go to pervertedjustice,com and see what they do. They are awash in their self-proclaimed glory after they lied to membners of the public.

They are awash in their self-proclaimed glory after they posed as an underage person and agreed to do all sorts of sex acts wioth adult males, and they are adults posing as teenager themselves. They make themsleves into liars by falsely impersonating underage persons and by not fuilfilling the words they tell the victims online in their chats. Why don't you read it where they tell these victims of their deceit about how they have been with grown men and such? Why don't you read it where they say, "That would be cool." after someone makes an advance towards an adult who is posing as a teenager? And, where they agree to meet the person, etc.
Lost control, didn't you?
Is that why you feel as if you need to lie so much now? I see where lots of these false impersonation games are not sticking. They feel as if they can lie and then order the victims to get counseling in the gayblade, governmental, pro-choice tax leech counseling centers. They are doing nothing more than usury and fraud in many cases." -- Wentzky almost comes out of the closet as a pedo/ephebophile in MID: <H%%Eg.28916$Uq1.22411@bignews6.bellsouth.net>

Funny you should mention that, Markie, since "getting off" is the only reason you continue to flame the newsgroups.

You and Toad are two of the best junkyard dogs out there.

no "capt" I don't flame the NGs at all nor do I get off on the content of RRAP there are Much better groups for that

Robeson Heil and Wismen are the ngs flamers posting on and on thier endless attacks on the imagingoined faults of all those that dare to disagree

you show yourself as Robeson or one of clones by YOUR obession with sex as if you aren't getting any

do yourself a favor get alife or get laid you will enjoy life more

You could be partially right about that one, Markie. I probably DON'T get as much as you do because I'm a lot more selective than you, I refuse to date outside of my own species and I confine my activities to the opposite sex only.

I enjoy life very much, Markie. It's people like you who hate their pathetic little existences and take out their frustrations in forums like these. People like you are the reason Prozac was developed.

Here's some free advice, not that you'll take it: when you find yourself in a hole the sensible thing to do is to STOP DIGGING!

<top-poasting fix0red>

Surely not as big a waste of bandwidth as Wabbit? He libels with wild abandon, outs personal contact info in x-poasts, and attempts to use AUK against his flamewar opponents. He only succeeded with Mark because Mark provided him with very boring opposition, not because we(tinw) "let"
him.

4. What's this newsgroup NOT for?

This group exists for recreational Kookology, not for Very Personal Vendetta. It is not to be used for general harassment of someone, or for net abuse such as spamming and flooding and cancelbombing in an attempt to gain vengeance on someone or get the denizens of AUK to shut up.
Either way, it won't work, it's very messy, "Bob" will give you triple your money back, and you don't get a life.

Also, we [tinw] are not in the business of harassing the vulnerable or the insane. Occasionally an apparent net.kook proves to be genuinely ill. In such cases the person is disqualified from winning awards and other posters are asked to avoid exacerbating his or her problems.
Similarly, trolling or kook-hunting in support groups is strongly discouraged.

And surely not as big a waste of bandwidth as some top-poasting fuckwit?
Flaming me when I'm making an intelligent reply, however offensively off-topic as it may seem to the Supreme Usenet Emperor Steve Stone, is perhaps a less-than-bright manoeuvre on your part.

Hint: It is not my problem if you don't know how to operate your newsreader's killfile. Or how to get a real newsreader.

Now isn't a time to sleep, Snarky. You should be very, very worried.
Dustfuck has more available bandwidth without most of his associates. And he used the word 'seriously'. Wun away! Wun away!

Anyone in a position of authority, power, or decision making needs safeguards. History has shown this to be true many times.

People who behave ethically at all times aren't bothered by safeguards.

They don't have to behave to a very high standard to be more ethical than the Current Occupants.

Who says it wasn't a problem?

And the contracts I referred to were for 2005 hurricane relief efforts. Hurricanes aren't a new thing, yet the efforts to deal with them were handled a lot better by previous administrations.

And was it Clinton who went into Yugoslavia - or the UN? Was it done to start a war or to stop one?

And how did that effort turn out? Was there more violence, disorder and destruction in Yugoslavia after "Mission Accomplished" than before?

No, that's not all you're doing here, Len.

Lowering the requirement may do more harm than benefit.

Some of your statements are wrong, Len. In fact many of the statements you make here are wrong.

Actually, they have.

FCC said, back in the early summer, they weren't going to make an announcement any time soon. There had been speculation of an R&O in time for Dayton, but FCC said no to that.

That's what the term "amateur radio" means. You're not a part of it.

You were subsidized by the taxpayers, Len.

The training and experience you received in military service were subsidized by the taxpayers. So was any work on "government funded" projects.

I have never seen K8MN denigrate or defame K2ASP, K2UNK or K0HB - all of whom are no-code-test advocates.

It also includes those licensed by other countries.

Being licensed is part of the definition. No amateur radio license means not a part of amateur radio.

It was a very good film, by the same folks who gave us "Chicken Run"
and the "Wallace and Gromit" short films.

They revived and brought to new levels the old technology of clay animation. While "Were-Rabbit" used some CGI, almost all of the animation used the old methods.

Both Python and "Wallace and Gromit" are of British origin - and very well done. One does not preclude the other.

For a disgusting example of what happens when a small minded petty group decides to have a vendetta against a member.

http://w2agn/qrparci.html

Also what happens when we allow any foreign power, including the British, to take over an American institution.

I was talking with a friend in a shopping center parking lot the other afternoon. I asked him if he'd seen the new cashier at the Aldi supermarket.

He replied, "You mean the cheery brunette with the cute smile?"

"That's the one", I said.

I started thinking about how various r.r.a.p. denizens might have responded.

Brian Burke:

"You mean like working out of band Frenchmen on 6m?"

Mark Morgan:

"Lier! There is noa new ckhout gril. Koks on parade <flsuh>"

Len Anderson:

"This is an amateur radio newsgroup. Tsk, tsk, poor baby! Herr Robust thinks that he is an expert in the field of supermarkets but he is one sack shy of a full cart. I have been shopping in supermarkets for 53 years. I KNOW supermarkets and I have been pushing a cart without the necessity for using morse code for decades. Hey, whatever turns you on, Toad.

What's irritating is that when the FCC takes you down they'll probably rewrite Part 15 to be even more restrictive than it is. In that case, NOBODY wins. But you don't care about that, do you? This is typical sociopathic behavior - to hell with everybody else as long as I get what I want.

Sex? I didn't see any reference to sex. I did, however, look at your "blog," etc., and found the answer to my question.

You are not only a moron, but possibly a dangerous psychotic one.

You are going into the "delete without reading" filter.

No, but PayPal has always maintained that the "service" they provide is merely transferring money around, so if you have your bank charge-back something that went through PayPal they will dispute the chargeback, and since they can demonstrate that they transferred the money from you to a seller, it's highly unlikely the bank will side with you. As far as the bank is concerned, you sent Paypal some money and they then sent it on to someone else -- unless you can dispute that, you're out of luck. The bank doesn't care what "someone else" might have done with the money subsequently.

That being said, PayPal does have their own fraud protection system these days. IMO, dealing with PayPal isn't as safe as buying directly with a credit card, but it's much safer than sending a check, money order, etc.

Bad sentence structure, Jimmy Noserve. :-)

Tsk. Sissy-prissy horrifications about "threats of physical violence?" :-) About some WORD PLAY?!? Poor baby...

Fearless Leader wannabes ought to look around inside the newsgroup for REAL "threats of violence." Go make your horrified revelations about "threats of violence" to that other radio amateur "Not Cocksucker Lloyd." He wants to KILL Mark. Stated that in message(s).

But...you only target the no-code-test advocates for your whining no-violence "complaints." You say you "can't control them (other morsemen)."

H Y P O C R I T E

Everyone can, by now, see your Game, Jimmy.

>> Tsk, tsk. All I'm doing is advocating the elimination >> of the morse code test for US amateur radio licensing...for >> the benefit of anyone who might want to enjoy the HOBBY of >> amateur radio.
>No, that's not all you're doing here, Len.

You, sure as hell isn't frozen, are NOT promoting anything but visions of your own 'expertise' (doubtful beyond morsemanship) and a RETROGRADE holding-back of the hobby of US amateur radio...a freezing of time to the standards and practices of ham radio of the 1930s.

>Lowering the requirement may do more harm than benefit.

You mean ELIMINATION OF THE CODE TEST FOR AN AMATEUR LICENSE.

YES, that would do "harm" to all the 20 WPM tested US amateur extra class who got their status, rank, title, and privileges through testing for morsemanship. It would strip their BRAGGING RIGHTS in amateur radio. Boo hoo. Psychological shock to their self-righteous, self-described "expertise" wherein they are "better" than lesser mortals (see Fred Hambrecht's outright "we are better than you" statement).

Benefit? Absolutely NONE for the smug, arrogant morsemen sitting around preening and posturing they "are better!"
(through morsemanship skills).

LOTS OF BENEFIT to the FUTURE of amateur radio...an amateur radio that is NOT ego-centric to morsemen and morsemanship.
That future has already begun...the love and appreciation of morsemanship as the epitome of amateur radio skill is dwindling in US amateur radio...has been dwindling for years.

Amateur morsemen are "leaders" in amateur radio only through antiquated regulations (law) and the stubborn, obstinate refusal of the (no longer) mighty "representative of US amateur radio" (the ARRL) to lobby for a PROGRESSIVE future.
Older Amateur morsemen lobbied for, and got, US amateur regulations that perpetuate the IMAGE of morsemanship as this epitome of amateur skill. Now they cry 'wrong' and 'foul' as the sky threatens to fall on their self-righteous self-depiction, egotistical vision of themselves.

Yes, it WILL be 'harmful' to a minority group. Tsk, tsk.
Their mighty EGOS might be deflated. Boo hoo.

>Some of your statements are wrong, Len. In fact many of the statements
>you make here are wrong.

ONLY by self-righteous amateur morsemen standards.

>> >You commented to the FCC. Happy now?
>> last year.
>Actually, they have.

"ACTUALLY" THE FCC HAS TAKEN NO VISIBLE ACTION ON THE NPRM.

What IS it that makes it so hard for you to understand that?
Is it the psychological fear you must have inside that your self-righteous, self-described, egotistical rank, status, titles, and privileges will DIMINISH?

>FCC said, back in the early summer, they weren't going to make an >announcement any time soon.

That is an official Federal Communications Commission statement?

Strange...it wasn't on the FCC website, did not appear in the Federal Register. Neither was it on the national newscasts or in major newspapers.

"Visible action" would be a Report and Order on a DECISION in regard to the NPRM. NONE HAS BEEN MADE AS OF THE FEDERAL REGISTER AS OF THURSDAY, 14 SEPTEMBER 2006.

> There had been speculation of an R&O in >time for Dayton, but FCC said no to that.

"Speculation" is NOT ACTION. "Speculation" is what the ARRL states when THEY DON'T KNOW.

>But you weren't a radio amateur then - or now.

But, YOU are NOT a regulator of US amateur radio, then,
now, future, or anyplace but your warped imagination.

Go to Ebay and buy a clue: YOU do NOT 'decide' who GETS INTO amateur radio over and above any other citizen. A radio HOBBY requiring federal licensing is NOT a "clubhouse" or "fraternity" (or sorority) where YOU can "rule" over others.

>> OH! You must mean FEDERALLY LICENSED "amateur" radio!
>That's what the term "amateur radio" means. You're not a part of it.

Do you REALLY understand the definition of "amateur?"

No, you don't. Just like all those other amateurs who mis-use the word "service" AS IF they were a 'service to the country' by taking up the HOBBY of amateur radio.

You think TOO much of yourself and your rank-status-title as an AMATEUR extra class radio licensee.

>The training and experience you received in military service were >subsidized by the taxpayers. So was any work on "government funded" >projects.

Do you want YOUR tax money refunded on account of that?

That disturbs you? If disturbed, you can always file a complaint with the General Accounting Office of the US government on it. How about the Attorney General? You can even go to CBS television network and get on "60 Minutes" to complain to the viewers how that is an oh-such-a-heinous "crime" against them! :-)

WE do NOT know WHERE or WHAT the-amateur-formerly-known-as 'N2EY' works, does, or how much he (or she) is "subsidized" by any government. That individual NEVER served in the US military, has NEVER taken an oath to put his LIFE on the line in the defense of his country. Make all the noise you want about "subsidies," Jimmy, but EVERY soldier, sailor, airman, or marine has THEIR LIFE on the line when they serve in the military. NO EXCEPTIONS. Ain't no "subsidy" that gives back life.

The "training" I got in the US Army was minimal. The "experience" was great (I thought it remarkable because of the eye-opening into the Big World of HF comms instead of the hobby of amateur radio). But, you fail to understand that each and every soldier in the US Army is, as the phrase was repeated to us, "A soldier FIRST and a specialist second."

Did you think (without asking) that ALL my civilian work was on "government contracts?" WRONG. Now hear this: AT NO TIME IN MY WORKING LIFE BEFORE OR AFTER MILITARY SERVICE DID I EVER WORK FOR ANYTHING BUT A CIVILIAN COMPANY, BUSINESS, OR CORPORATION. During that time I have NEVER received any "subsidy" from any government. NEVER have I worked for any government agency, been a civilian employee, OR SOUGHT any job/task/position with any branch of the government.

Farmers and agribusiness corporations receive DIRECT subsidies from the US government. Take your crying to THEM, not me.

When you dismount from your high hobby horse you can - if you have the courage - tell what YOU do for a living? Besides doing (as one of your Comments on an NPRM said) "transportation industry" work.

You haven't got the GUTS to explain, do you?

Think about this: "K8MN" was a civilian employee of the US Department of State (they call it "The Foreign Service"), long enough to receive a nice pension on retirement, ALL paid for by the US taxpayer. ALL. Even for BEING DX.

Hans Brakob spent most of his life in the USN, rising to topmost enlisted rank, got his "thirty" honorably. [he made his DD-214 visible to all]

Bill Sohl served honorably in the USN also. Like Hans, Bill was a sailor first, a specialist second.

Phil Kane served as a commissioned officer in the US military as a missle launcher. He also served the government of Israel.

Now all four mentioned received monetary compensation from a government for their military service and gained experience (and a variety of training) IN that REAL military service. Would you say THEY were "subsidized by the taxpayer?" [no, you would exclude them because they got amateur licenses and are not your newsgroup
'enemy']

>And you're not a part of amateur radio, Len.

Which means WHAT, Jimmy Noserve? That YOU "regulate" who is allowed to GET IN? That amateur radio licensees have 'more rights' than the rest of us US citizens?

>> "Amateur" means
>> "without pecuniary interest." Non-professional. The >> definition is semantically equivalent to a HOBBY, an >> avocation.
>Being licensed is part of the definition. No amateur radio license >means not a part of amateur radio.

Tsk. You will quibble semantics forever just to appear
YOU are "right." :-)

Do you have professional qualifications as a master of etymology, English as she are spoke, or have earned actual money from the sale of work to publications?

Hint: I've sold work (that's the name for authored articles in the publishing biz) to more than just Ham Radio magazine. [but you really don't want to know that except to make denigrations of it...:-)]

>It was a very good film, by the same folks who gave us "Chicken Run"
>and the "Wallace and Gromit" short films.
>They revived and brought to new levels the old technology of clay

Quick, Jimmy...go to Chicago so you can appear as a guest replacement for Roger Ebert on "Ebert and Roeper!" There's still a chance for you to get famous. If you are clever, you can slip in some biased PR for morse code and reach MILLIONS in the audience! :-)

[that would be one helluva lot better than what the ARRL has done so far...]

>You're not wrong all the time, Len. Just some of the time. You just >don't like having your errors pointed out and corrected.

Sweetums, you MANUFACTURE "errors" (that aren't really errors per se, only some semantic quibbles and bits that only satisfy your image hunger). Bone apetite, doggy boy.

>You demonstrate intolerance of anyone who disagrees with you.

So, call the ACLU and file Civil Rights suits.

That would fit you better than Men's Wearhouse could. :-)

Try to understand, Jimmy, TRY...YOUR opinions about major political issues (as in elimination/retention of the morse code test) are NOT intrinsically "right." Neither are those who DISAGREE with you automatically "wrong." Really. In reality.

YOU are NOT "judge" over "rightness" despite umpteen years as a federally licensed amateur radio operator complete with rank, status, title, and privilege achieved mainly through morsemanship.

Now, I am SURE you think it is "intolerant" of me to disagree with your god-given authority of "rightness" and "wrongness" about morsemanship. I have NO tolerance for BIGOTRY. I have NO tolerance for any who posture and preen, think so highly of their accomplishments that they say they are "better" than mortals through morsemanship in an amateur radio hobby. I have little tolerance for smug, arrogant claims of radio "superiority" based on meeting 1930s standards and practices in a HOBBY activity.

Jimmy, I really don't have much tolerance for you as a person. You've made fun of my military service (that I did long ago), manufactured great mountains of out-of-context mentions as "errors" and thought of yourself as the mighty military maven, all without serving your country one day in any military branch.

Yet, there you sit in front of your computer, "unable to control" another amateur extra morseman who bluffs his way trying to appear the Last Action Hero, all without providing a single bit of proof of 18 years of his alleged "military career." You made some weak-sister postings to him some time ago, yet you feel compelled to spend hours composing "corrections" (read Lectures from the ARRL good book) of OTHERS.

Here is that word for you to chew on, one that fits most amateur morsemen to a "T:"

H Y P O C R I T E

Enjoy.

Brian, you forgot the "H" after 'Preparation'... :-)

Of course Heil as the "authority" to correct everyone's

He is effluent.

You could be partially right about that one, Markie. I probably DON'T get as much as you do because I'm a lot more selective than you, I refuse to date outside of my own species and I confine my activities to the opposite sex only.

> do yourself a favor get alife or get laid you will enjoy life more

I enjoy life very much, Markie. It's people like you who hate their pathetic little existences and take out their frustrations in forums like these. People like you are the reason Prozac was developed.

Here's some free advice, not that you'll take it: when you find yourself in a hole the sensible thing to do is to STOP DIGGING!

As "wismen" would say, "Oh, the irony." Mark, who posts literally hundreds of lines of nonsense each month calls Heil a "flamer". In fact, I'm willing to bet that Steve's and Dave's monthly posts added together are but a fraction of what Mark posts. And he calls THEM flamers???

Mark has proven still again that stupidity has few boundaries.

You've tried those kinds of threats of violence here before, Len.
Really brave of you, considering I'm a couple of thousand miles away.

Such threats, even with smileys, are the mark of someone who can't make their point verbally.

What does that have to do with me? I do not know who "Lloyd" is, where s/he is, or what the disagreement between "Lloyd" and "Mark" is. He has not threatened to "use a 2x4 to bang on the heads of 1x2s."

In fact I don't read much of rrap at all anymore. Too much noise and too little signal. You replied to my posting so I read what you wrote.
Now you're all upset, shouting and carrying on like an overtired two-year-old because I disagree with you and point out your mistakes.

> But...you only target the no-code-test advocates for your > whining no-violence "complaints." You say you "can't control

The only person I can "control" is myself, Len.

For some reason you assign group blame - if one Morse Code test advocate does something you dislike, you hold all Morse Code test advocates responsible. That's just plain illogical, Len. It makes no sense at all. Yet you keep on doing it - why?

> H Y P O C R I T E

You can't be talking about me when you use that word, Len.

Actually I have several games. I like chess, Scrabble, Monopoly and Yahtzee. Also amateur radio contesting, which is a game of sorts.

That's simply not the case, Len.

And that sort of thing sounds odd coming from someone who wanted to freeze their neighborhood to the standards and practices of zoning in the 1960s.

> >Lowering the requirement may do more harm than benefit.

Not just that. Lowering the written test requirements as well. Also the imposition of age requirements for an amateur radio license. Such changes may do more harm than benefit. That's a plain and simple fact.

Perhaps you should read what Fred actually wrote and try to understand what he is actually promoting.

You should also read my reply to him.

btw, I am not in control of what Fred posts here.

Gee, Len, you spend much of your verbiage here telling us how superior you are.

When have I described myself as being "better"? Exact quotes, not your misinterpretations, please.

No, that's not the case at all, Len.

You really seem to be jealous of those who have a skill set that you don't have.

your neighborhood, Len?

By any objective standards. For example, the ARRL has, in the past, had more than 25% of US licensed radio amateurs as members.

Actually, they have. You just missed it.

It's the fact that FCC made an announcement about when they would put out the R&O. The announcement boiled down to 'not any time soon'.

It was in a statement by an FCC official. You missed it - I didn't.

country? If so, you are very wrong.

The fact remains that the training and experience you received in military service were subsidized by the taxpayers. So was any work on "government funded"
projects.

Where did I say government subsidy was a bad thing? That's your beef.

> WE do NOT know WHERE or WHAT the-amateur-formerly-known-

Who is "we", Len? I know where I work and what I do, as do some of the folks who read rrap.

I have held the amateur radio callsign N2EY since 1977 and my license is up to date. Nothing "formerly" about it.

The fact remains that the training and experience you received in military service were subsidized by the taxpayers. So was any work on "government funded"
projects.

There are plenty of people who are not in the military who put their lives on the line, too. For example, firemen, law enforcement officers, emergency response people, many health care workers are at risk of death in their line of work.

They all deserve respect for what they do.

Yet you worked on projects that were funded by the government, right?
If so, you were subsidized by the taxpayers.

Your subsidies were indirect but they were still subsidies. If your employer was paid by the govt. for work you did, then your paycheck came from the taxpayers.

Why should I tell you, Len? I already know how you will react.

Is transportation unimportant, Len? Is the transportation industry not a worthwhile career?

No. Because I am right.

Your errors are of all kinds, Len. You make them, not me.

For an alleged professional writer you sure don't proofread or check facts very well.

That's true.

However, your intolerance of disagreement with your opinions is demonstrated in practically everything you post here.

It's your uncivil and childish behavior that's intolerant, Len.

Where did I make fun of anyone's military service, Len? Show us.

I know that you made fun of a Coast Guard radio operator's military service, though, in the classic "sphincters" post.

You mean how I point out your mistakes? That's straight from me, Len, not the ARRL or anybody else.

Now do try and behave a bit more civilly.

You should work on your Morse Code skills - and your people skills.

And others don't like homophiles who walk around with a chip on their shoulder and get in everyone's face with their sexual preferences.

Homophilia is the other face of homophobia, and it appears that you suffer from the former malady. Stop looking at everyone else through the prism of your own sexual tension, and stop projecting your fears upon those who are different from you.

Your untrue and fearful cries of "homophobe" are a way of absolving yourself from any responsibility for your own life situation. It is the same thing that blacks do when they overuse the term of "racist," and most of us can see right through that kind of rhetoric no matter who uses it.

You, sir, are playing the blame game, but it doesn't work any longer. It's been worn out long ago. Come up with something real, or else continue to remain a newsgroup fool.

Interesting threads

What about setting up two checking accounts (main and secondary) - the secondary is not linked to anything (overdraft, credit card, savings, etc)

Then keep a small amount in the secondary account ($5 or zero)

Now when some one sends you funds - tell Paypal to send it to the secondary account - when received quickly transfer to your main account.

When you buy thru Palpal -- quickly deposit the required amount in the secondary fund

In both case -- keep track of things until the transaction is complete

Whatta ya think ??

CL -- been doing that for some time now

Problem is that if PayPal tries to take funds out of the account that aren't there, YOU get charge with NSF, including whatever outrageous fee your bank charges for NSF checks, and in some states (Idaho comes to mind) you can actually be charged with a felony.

"Knit back?" Nah. US amateur radio has been divided by morse code for decades. It is plain to all but the amateur morsemen who think they are intrinsically "right" in their beliefs.

Those old, smug, arrogant morsemen do not die nor do they fade away. They are immortal by their own admission (Robeson) and (self-described) virtual gods of radio on the 'Olympus' of the epitome of amateur radio skill, morsemanship.

[ever notice how 'epitome' and 'epitaph' sound alike?... :-)]

Perhaps that is true. Certainly not since that December 1999 announcement of what would happen in the latest restructuring of amateur regulations...and the standardization of ALL morse code test rates at 5 WPM. :-)

>> >You've claimed in the past to only be here for civil debate.

>I truly wish I could call you a lier on that one len I reaaly really do

You can and be partially correct...:-) I was referring to the devout amateur morsemen in my quoted sentence above.

The only place left for "civil debate" is Comments to the FCC.

Some of the Replies to Comments there are actually priceless gems of fantasy thinking. I rather liked the ones where "morse code testing is 'necessary' to protect our nation from terrorists!"

I get the picture of some morseman, in the robes of the Order of St. Hiram, holding up a code key (in place of a cross) to some suicide bomber...who then, at the sight of this Divine Thing, slinks off without ever detonating himself. :-)

I fibbed slightly there. Some years back I did some "voice over" work before getting an AFTRA card. That got on a tape recording (professional variety, big reels, wide mag tape) but it wasn't about any amateur radio subject. :-) Hi hi! :-) Good one.

One problem those "wheels" have is that their "tires" keep getting punctured. Then they find out that it's hard to get new "tires" of the old, antiquated variety they were used to.
When that happens they are running on the rims, clattering and banging along the highway at slow speeds, unable to keep up.

REALITY is the 'spike strip' on the morse highway.

Pop, pop, flap, flap...

Perhaps. But no matter how low the bar, the Democrats probably cannot rise to it.

Bush Sr.

August 1992. "Andrew would ultimately become the most expensive natural disaster in American history. More than 60 people were killed and scores more injured, 117,000 homes were destroyed or suffered major damage, some two million residents had to be temporarily evacuated.
Flooding and high winds destroyed thousands of acres of crops. And overall estimates placed the storm's cost at more than $20 billion."

> And was it Clinton who went into Yugoslavia - or the UN?

You know the answer to that one, and you know that I know, so don't lie to me.

> Was it done to start a war or to stop one?

We had absolutely no interests in Yugoslavia. It was a European problem that they could have handled.

> And how did that effort turn out?

Lots and lots of new DX.

> Was there more violence, disorder and > destruction in Yugoslavia after "Mission Accomplished" than before?

Clinton had an exit strategy. No matter what, we would be out in one year. Clinton was saying that as I tagged people during the 1995 Thanksgiving week. Just the other day I ran into some soldiers that were returning from Bosnia.

Hopefully Heil's smugness doesn't detract too much from his run for the Roanoke Division....

Brian: The DX station can do likewise if he's not a serious contester. A US station might get a pileup going during an IOTA contest.

Heil: An IOTA contest? Good Lord deliver us.

Brian: For some crazy reason, other hams like to work USA islands. Guam was one of those islands.

Heil: Marvy.

Two years ago, the court rejected Bush's claim that he had authority to seize and detain terrorism suspects and indefinitely deny them access to courts or lawyers. In this follow-up case, the justices focused solely on the issue of trials for some of the men.

The vote was split 5-3, with moderate Justice Anthony M. Kennedy joining the court's liberal members in most of the ruling against the Bush administration. Chief Justice John Roberts, named to the lead the court last September by Bush, was sidelined in the case because as an appeals court judge he had backed the government over Hamdan.

Thursday's ruling overturned that decision.

That could happen on your main account if you aren't careful (joint checking accounts get really messy with two folks writing checks.)

The secondary account is strictly for Paypal - nothing else.
I said open up a ligit secondary account
I said when you use Paypal to purchase
First transfer the money to your secondary account
Both the money and the account are legit and there waiting for paypal
Of course you must give Paypal your legit account humber for the secondary account

In other words - I don't want any one (not even my wife - we have separate accounts - keeps things in order) to have access to my Main account.

CL -- works so far. Crossing typing fingers.

I'll agree with you 100%. I have a Tech license and enjoy the hobby very much. I plan on upgrading to General once the code issue is settled. I have always heard that "If you don't use it, you lose it". I have no interest in the code so why should I not be allowed to enjoy Ham radio. BTW, my CB license years back was KLW4194..

You have no proof of that, your just assuming and that don't mean shit, the fact is Part 15 has over the years beocme very relaxed instead of be restricted and if I am breaking the rules they aren't going to change the rules because of one person broke the rules...only a CB operator would think that...No what I think it is, is your one of those little pussy beacon operators on that frequency and your pissed off because some one broadcasting on that frequency instead of running a little pussy beacon.....oh well...

Hey, Toad, exactly what is a "pussy beacon?" When I was a teenager, a "pussy beacon" was a metalflake blue Corvette with side pipes. Worked really well, too.

Dance, Toad, DANCE!

Yeah and I have a feeling in a few more years they will make it lease restrictive, if the FCC gets it way with BPL and a few other technologies coming out.

Only if you use the ISP to disseminate your virtual child porn.
Otherwise, do what you want on the 'net. And don't trot out your standard argument about "the Supreme Court says it's legal." Slavery was once legal, too; did that make it right? Obviously the ISPs agreed because they TOSsed your ass.

> HAM RADIO SUPPRESSORS OF FREE SPEECH ON AND OFF THE RADIO!!!
> AND USES A FEDERAL FUND AGENCY (FCC) TO SUPPRESS THAT SPEECH!!!

Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes made the classic comment on free speech when he said that the right of free speech does not give you the right to yell "Fire!" in a crowded theater when there is no fire.

Nobody is suppressing your free speech except you. An ISP is a private company and is free to contract for service as they see fit as long as they don't violate the law. Your ISPs had TOS provisions against porn and they interpreted what you were doing as a violation of their TOS.
The ISP is not the government and the Internet is not owned by the government (yet; they're working on it, though).

At the risk of creating a monster, here's an idea: why don't you set up your own ISP? Then you can have any terms of service you like. It's easy to do and really doesn't cost that much in startup capital. You might even be able to get in on the ground floor of BPL in your area.

I can see it now: Toddlink, dialup for $9.95/mo, broadband for $29.95/mo.

Who knows? You might even make enough money to be able to afford to replace Omega One's "coax with big freaking holes in it."

No argument. But remember: the BPL crowd has the Electronic Industries Association and quite a few cubic yards of money behind it. Part 15 experimenters don't have nearly that kind of clout. With the FCC, money talks and BS walks. They could very easily rewrite Part 15 to prohibit any kind of experimentation not specifically authorized by the FCC, meaning, pay big bucks for a special authorization. It's the little guys like us who will take it in the shorts like always.

> http://kb9rqz.blogspot.com/

There most certainly is such a thing as virtual kiddy porn. In the Miller decision, the Supreme Court recognized that there was but didn't directly address the legality of it.

The physical medium by which the porn is conveyed (hardcopy media, digital media, etc.) is not the problem. The problem is HOW the porn is created. In the case of child porn, real children are exploited in the creation of the images. Children, unlike adults, are legally considered incapable of deciding of their own free will to participate in the creation of pornography. That makes creation of that kind of child porn illegal under a host of criminal statutes.

Anime that portrays cartoon children engaged in sexual acts is not child pornography by the legal definition. However, it is considered to be such by most rational adults.

If you want to create virtual child porn there is no law (as of now) that prohibits you from doing it. But there is also no law that says anyone has to like it and also no law that says private individuals have to assist you in its dissemination. If your ISP doesn't like it they can terminate your service. You can take them to court but it's doubtful that you would get anywhere. Judges have children, too.

Could be that the ISP ordinance in Taylorville was passed primarily to keep you off the 'net, which would say a lot. By the way, does your 28 page letter to the Attorney Genery [sic] tell him to "eat ### and

No that's what they have Part 5 for. Part 5 is a experimental license for experimenting. read the rules.

http://www.access.gpo.gov/nara/cfr/waisidx_05/47cfrv1_05.html

BTW an Experimental License isn't that much, I believe it's around $55 dollars, hell anyone can afford that!

Part 15 wasn't really in reality designed for experimenting or broadcasting it was designed to regulated unwanted fields.

I doubt it says "eat ### and ######## die" it [pprobaly does not nt eat shit and die asshole either Robesonion one but then like Robeson you fail to realize their is a place for using the word "shit" and a place for susing the word "feces"

Unwanted fields? Sounds like they had Omega One in mind when they wrote the regulations.

The Japanese can see it any way they want. Americans see it differently. In certain African countries, compulsory clitoridectomies of young women are considered normal and part of their tribal culture.
Americans see the practice as abhorrent. Different cultures interpret things differently.

I'll answer that as soon as you translate it into English.

No, you would rather do it than look at it. Just don't do it around my kids or I'll introduce you to my attorneys: Colt, Ruger, Beretta, Smith & Wesson.

Again, translate that into English, please. I think you said that Todd is protected by the courts. And he is, but only to the extent that he is protected from censorship BY THE GOVERNMENT. If his ISP, which is a private company, doesn't like what Todd is putting through their data stream they have every right to pull the plug on his service.

English, dammit, English! I suppose you were born with the name "an old friend?"

Yeah, you have to be a real man to flagrantly violate the rules and brag about it on the Internet.

In the real world that's called "stupidity."

You didn't get the point (but, then, you rarely do). What I meant was that they could easily rewrite Part 15 or any other rule to restrict experimenting even further. We don't want that.

You bring up a good question, though. If it's so cheap and easy to get an experimental license, why didn't you get one for your operation on 13.556 MHz? Then this entire discussion would be moot.

What's a credit rating? I haven't used credit for anything for over 20 years. Its been cash up front, or nothing.

The reason many people don't like Americans is because of people like you, Markie, who try to impose their silly, uninformed and illiterate views on everyone. You and the rest of the Inferior Five have irreparably trashed this newsgroup with your incessant flaming, and it is being read by people in other countries. How do you think that makes Americans look to the rest of the world? Not that you care, sociopath.

You might not care about your credit rating but you will care when a lien is placed against your home.

And if you were as financially astute as you like to think you are, you would know that companies and the Government use your credit report to decide whether they will hire you, give you a security clearance, determine the rates they charge you...and many other issues that affect you.

Your credit rating matters.

And I also note that many of those who are bad credit risks deal in cash only...because it is the only way others will deal with them.

2590. Woger back in Northern Regional Jail again?

Woger hasn't done his usual drive-by shooting of the newsgroups this morning, so I assume he's had to report to Northern Regional Jail early, in order to make up for getting last Saturday off.

Once Woger is released on Monday morning, he'll show up on NIM Busters to crow about how much good sex he gets over the weekend, while his nemesis Lloyd Davies has to spend the weekend alone.

Now we know who Woger's "high class models" really are.

"And that fat hog Pam shouldn't caterwaul with her hunchbacked fatass mommy with the Xtian band anymore, she caused more stray dogs to come around that run-down shack that Ovis is housed in. Another Xtian hypocrite, that radio station is a known haven for child abuse in the mound town. She is a fucking idiot." -- AB8MQ in message <akd8bpkce8@pita.alt.net>

Ironically, your credit rating will actually be "less than perfect" then! :-)

Assuming you don't need a new mortgage any time soon, I suppose you're set.

Do you have a credit card? I know it's possible, but it sure seems like a pain to live without one these days... especially for things like renting cars.

I'm hoping it'll soon be illegal for companies to use credit reports in determining whether or not they want to hire people. I'm pretty conservative myself, and I have excellent credit, but making it harder for someone who has bad credit to get a job strikes me as absurd: Sure, most people have bad credit due to spending too much on HDTVs or fancy cars or whatever and not on baby formula and generic brand blue jeans, but even so, the humanitarian in me says it's better to let these people at least get a job and try to get their monetary affairs in order than keeping them jobless and forcing them onto the welfare rolls. From an economic point of view, I'd rather have individual companies bear the purported risk that those with bad credit are supposedly more likely to steal, defraud the employer, etc. than foist all those people onto the taxpayer's teat.

For security clearances looking at credit reports seems reasonable... I'm told that for security clearances at a high enough level the feds go all the way back to your childhood to dig up dirt on you that could be used in a blackmail setup.

For interest rates... well... hard to say; I can see more of a legitimate risk there than with hiring.

Oh, dear, the Mighty Macho Morseman is AFRAID?!?

Afraid of VIOLINS? Shall we all BOW down to him lest Awwww..."you don't know...." Poor thing isn't aware or informed. [David Horowitz would be horrified]

Tsk, I post a cute saying (actually thought up by another amateur extra who did pass a 20 WPM code test) and you come all UNGLUED! Quick, call Eastman for more cyanoacrylic adhesive!

Makes it very easy to walk all over your posting!

Absolutely! :-)

No problem to me. [got enough rope for either]

WHICH no-code-test advocate said that?

[Answer: NONE...that was a fabrication by morsemen]

There is NO UPPER LIMIT on the written test elements in the Question Pool, Jimmy...leastways NOT from the FCC. The legal minimum is TEN pool questions for EACH required pool question. The QPC could generate 10, 20, maybe 30 times the legal minimum and be lawful...but eventually the question pool and answers could be greater than the best eidetic's abilities.

> Also the >imposition of age requirements for an amateur radio license.

Poor baby, still FIXATED on 7 years ago!

I STOPPED pursuing that suggestion to the FCC (on the last page of my Comment on NPRM 98-143) SEVEN YEARS AGO!
Since FCC 99-412 (the Report and Order on Restructuring) nullified all those Comments in regards to the FCC decision and did not pick up on my suggestion, I didn't continue after that.

BUT...all the angry pro-code-test morsemen seem to LIKE necro-equine flagellation ('beating a dead horse') and a few beaters (like yourself) are intent on trying to breathe life in to the creature no matter what.

We can all guess WHY you are doing it, Jimmy. You are obsessed with trying to prove ME 'doing wrong' and have MANUFACTURED things that haven't existed for a long time.

DROP it, Jimmy. I did, long ago. All you are doing is beating off, er beating that very dead horse.

Stop with your necrophilia.

None at all. :-) If you were worth the effort you'd have been Replied to. No problem.

>It's a radio service, Len. And like it or not, I'm part of it and >you're not.

All throughout Title 47 C.F.R., the word "service" is a regulatory term denoting a type and kind of radio activity being regulated.

See Citizens Band Radio SERVICE or Radio Control Radio SERVICE.

Are you my waiter tonight? Good, then you can serve us something palatable instead of long-dead, severly beaten horsemeat.

Insufficient answer. You already said you were a "SERVICE."

Try to get your act together. And be quick with that horsemeat.

>Are you saying that amateur radio does not perform any service to the >country?

Encapsulated in the briefest meaning, YES.

United States amateur radio could disappear at midnight and the regular and emergency communications of the USA would keep on functioning. Police would respond to radio calls, fire engines would roll, ambulances would be dispatched, Local governments would continue without pause, already having lots and lots of radio equipment and operators.
Air traffic would continue, maritime traffic would continue, trains would still be training, highways would continue to function (and be repaired/renovated) as needed, all without ham radio. Cellular telephony would continue (1 in 3 Americans having one), the Internet would continue, landline telephony would continue. Mass Media (Broadcasting) would continue unabated. The Forest Service would continue spotting fires, reporting any via their own radios. River and Inland Waterways would still have their VHF FM voice communications. GPSS would continue functioning. NOAA would still continue with weather information. Emergencies at sea would still be handled by GMDSS. Emergencies in the air would still be handled by VHF (over land) and HF voice (over ocean). Emergencies on land would be handled by a variety of Public Safety Radio Service facilities, all tied together in large networks that operate nicely.

All in the preceding paragraph are INDEPENDENT of amateur radio, Jimmy. They ARE a definite SERVICE to the USA and the people within it. Public safety 24/7.

Now, it MIGHT happen that aliens from outer space MIGHT invade the earth. "ONLY" morse code skill can possibly thwart these advanced aliens who have sufficient knowledge and intelligence to cross interstellar space? [work on your script some more...it was already done...]

Tsk, tsk, tsk...all of Heil's 'foreign service' adventures,

No "subsidy" there.

I have NEVER worked for any business, company, corporation that was "subsidized" by the government. NONE.

You are confused on the use of the word "subsidy."

But, you still don't have the GUTS to tell "the rest of us"

Sigh...let me rephrase: You haven't got the COURAGE.

"Guts" is too visceral for sissy-prissies.

>All it means is that you aren't a participant. You're all talk and no

And here you were, rushing home from "work in transportation"

Only by some masochist, sweetums. :-)

>I'm a judge of what's true and what isn't, Len.

You are a morseman and you're okay... :-)

You are naturally superior in all aspects. Except your aspect is in a sling.

>It's your uncivil and childish behavior that's intolerant, Len.

Oh, you expect ALL your "inferiors" to be masochists?

Tsk, tsk, the FCC has NO age limit on amateur radio.
Now YOU don't like childish behavior? Too bad, the FCC would allow a 2-year-old to hold a ham license. :-)

>Where did I make fun of anyone's military service, Len? Show us.

Drop this "show us" ploy, Jimmy Noserve. That's an OLD trick, trying to make the challenged go through all those (if available) archives, cut-and-paste, only to have you rationalize YOU are "right" because you're a morseman, etc.

That "show us" response of actually showing where and when you did it is negative ROI. As I said, you, when confronted, will DENY it, rationalize some "reasons" that you are "right" and then ignore it. :-)

Besides, OLD POSTS are in the past...they've already been argued over. You are NOT going to "win" any such OLD argument by repetition of the SAME posts from archives!
But...you keep on trying and trying and trying. You got very trying a long time ago.

>What someone else posts here is their business, Len.

Ah! The no-guts rationalization hard at work! :-)

So..."someone else" isn't bothered with, but you DO try to bring me down every chance you get! :-)

What do you FEAR from me, Jimmy? C'mon, you can level with the group...

You don't like your image from the other side of your screen described for others? Tsk...and a Mother Superior at that!

>Now do try and behave a bit more civilly.

Is that an ORDER, Mother? Or just something FROM the Order?

no dumbass YOU don't get the point Part 15 wasn't designed for experimenting, it was designed for unwanted field emissions like what a computer radiates off, or off type accepted transmitter. Cordless phones and BPL are two other thing govern by Part 15 but if you read ALL of part 15 that is what part 15 is for. If you want to experiment get an experimental license. Don't come on here and claim "oh, he's breaking the law, now the FCC is going to tighten the rules governing part 15, in reality they are NOT going to change the rules because one person breaks the rules.You seem to lack understanding on that and I'm not going to debate it with someone who has no understanding of it.
Because I'll tell you what a number of people has broken Part 15 over the years and has been busted by the FCC (see Dugan V FCC, Dugan was running a pirate radio station on the FM broadcast band and was busted by the FCC who claimed he was in violation of Part 15, the US Court of Appeal up held it) Did the FCC change the rule after Dugan or any other pirate on the FM band after the FCC busted them for violating Part 15??
Answer NO, the rule has remained the same before and after all those pirates has been busted. Your claim that the FCC will tighten the rules because I might be violating Part 15 doesn't hold water. I suggest before you get on here and claim something that you better do some deep research into the matter.

The ISP removed me because they believed and was told by the individuals who complainted that the material was "child pornography" which it is not, The second problem is "obscenity" it has always been ruled that only a court can deiced what is obscene, secondly the ISP has individuals posting material on Adultfinders.com, blogs and other places on the web which could be consider obscene, so what apply to one person should apply for all, in this case it does not. Thirdly it is a common practice amoung ISP to warn a User that they are violation of their TOS, I recieved no such warning, which now can be consider a "bad Business practice" since the vast majority of ISP's do warn their users before removing them from the web. Fourth, the Courts has ruled in Verizon V RIAA that a ISP doesn't have control of what's on a users computer, and that and ISP is nothing more then a conduit.(In Verzion V RIAA, the RIAA sued Verzion fro not handing over the names of individuals who were sharing music on P2P networks. The Court ruled that Verzion can't be held accountable for copyright infringement since the material was on their users computer and not on directly on their server . Verzion and ISP were nothing more then conduits, like the phone company and had really no control over the content.) The CDA also protects internet service providers of libel for the content their users put out. The General rule of thumb on the web is, if you don't like what's on someone website then don't go there. Some of the individuals visited the site long before complaining and had the chose not to gom their if they are offended by it. But as for obscentiy goes as the Supreme court stated "just because one person is offended by the material doesn't not mean it need to be banned"

That IP address belongs to illinois.net, an organization which lists its purpose as follows:

"The Illinois Century Network (ICN) is a telecommunications backbone providing high speed access to data, video, and audio communication in schools and libraries, at colleges and universities, to public libraries and museums, and for local government and state agencies."

Just like Wiseman, you have to go somewhere else (Charleston) to post.

indeed his psoting and postion has hardly been the same since I decided to out steveie him for awhile only I simply used the truth which is more effect (and I used more BW as well)

Because Morseman aren't lazy and stupid, we're better than you are. Now bow down and worship, And pray to be healed from your mental illness and laziness so that you can be a real ham.

If you pass CW I would welcome you onto HF. Until that happens, you're just a phoney.

Todd will never get a waiver because the FCC doesn't consider granting a waiver with the single purpose of playing shitty songs over and over experimental.

Now, if Todd would show Omega One was a radio experiment to see how many people he could make puke listening to the radio, he'd have that waiver.

But we need to improve the operators first.

Step 1: No more automatic renewals. Individuals must retest and pass all elements required for their license class.

Step 2: The passing score for written exams needs to be raised to 85%.

Step 3: Code elements should be 13 wpm for General, and 20 wpm for Extra.

Step 4: Make the no-code license one year non-renewable.

Email these to President Bush and tell him you want to help with the war on terror. Thanks.

I wonder if Adam Vocks knows you operate a private web server and if having a private web-server is a TOS violation, and if they care that you promote illegal radio activity with it.

A few of us here might have to pop off an ole' email to Adam to let him know about it. BWAAHAAAHAAHAAHAAHAAHAAAA

That's why you'll never be an asset to the ham radio service. You're too lazy to be an asset.

Roger must do something because I don't see him posting twenty-four hours a day. He doesn't even jam Omega one even though he has a N9OGL fetish.

Now Markie, whenever someone posts something, in less than ten minutes time, Markie has followed up to it with some mis-spelled mindless nonsence. There's no way he could have a job.

To bad he don't use some of that internet time to learn CW and be a better ham radio operator.

Since you play the same shitty songs over & over & over. All you need to do to is make one Pod-cast and it should be good twenty-four hours a day, 365 days a year.

That's all true. But it does not mean that Amateur Radio does not perform any service to the country.

Yet there are times when those communications services are inadequate for the situation, and Amateur Radio meets the need. That's when Amateur Radio performs a service to the country.

It can be as simple as using Amateur Radio communication to report a broken-down vehicle in a spot where cell phones don't work.

Another example was when the space shuttle disintegrated on reentry a few years ago. There was an extensive search effort to find pieces of the wreckage - which were spread over a wide area.

Some of the communications for the search efforts were conducted by Amateur Radio, because other facilities were unavailable or did not meet the needs of the searchers.

That's service to the country.

There are many more examples, from hurricane Katrina to providing communications for a parade or similar event.

Your claim that Amateur Radio does not perform any service to the country is simply not true, Len. It's an error on your part - I didn't make it up.

Read the report on Hurricane Katrina that details what worked and what didn't. Amateur Radio provided an important service to the country - according to the authors of the report.

I disagree with Len on this point. Amateur Radio can be a service to the country.

The problem is the amateurs that ramp up the actual service to the country into a superman complex.

No, you can't include this. I was laughed at when I suggested that cellular telephones handle minor emergencies on a day in and day out basis.

So if these emergencies aren't really emergencies, then when a no-coder with a VHF radio steps in where the cell network doesn't cover, the "emergency" still isn't an emergency.

> Another example was when the space shuttle disintegrated on reentry a > few years ago. There was an extensive search effort to find pieces of What was the emergency?

The crew were beyond saving. The property was beyond saving.

So?

> That's service to the country.

Not by the definition of saving life or property?

> There are many more examples, from hurricane Katrina to providing

OK, you're finally getting to an emergency.

> Your claim that Amateur Radio does not perform any service to the

Just don't overinflate our actual involvement.

1. What is this newsgroup, alt.usenet.kooks (AUK)?

A mass of electrons spread out upon bandwidth scattered across the globe for the express purpose of separating the wheat from the chaff of the net.

2. This is a joke, right? RIGHT?!!

No more a joke than the fact that ISPs let people on every day who have nothing better to do than annoy their neighbors enough to win by popular vote silly little awards created for just such buffoons as them.

3. What's this newsgroup for?

The newsgroup alt.usenet.kooks is for the discovery and discussion of Kooks on Usenet and the Internet. These people are known technically as net.kooks.

4. What's this newsgroup NOT for?

This group exists for recreational Kookology, not for Very Personal Vendetta. It is not to be used for general harassment of someone, or for net abuse such as spamming and flooding and cancelbombing in an attempt to gain vengeance on someone or get the denizens of AUK to shut up. Either way, it won't work, it's very messy, "Bob" will give you triple your money back, and you don't get a life.

Also, we [tinw] are not in the business of harassing the vulnerable or the insane. Occasionally an apparent net.kook proves to be genuinely ill. In such cases the person is disqualified from winning awards and other posters are asked to avoid exacerbating his or her problems. Similarly, trolling or kook-hunting in support groups is strongly discouraged.

5. Who let this newsgroup in here, and why wasn't I notified?

That's what you get for hogging the Beer Fund.

(Here you can view the control message that started it all, from our Mighty Founder MAC.)

http://www.netcabal.com/auk/cmsg.html

6. Who is a net.kook?

If you post uniquely strange, preferably incomprehensible articles, or you manifest a persistent, extreme, and somewhat bizarre obsession, you just might be a net.kook. And more.

It is important to note the subtle distinction between a net.kook, a net.cretin, a clueless newbie, troll, or garden-variety @$$hole. The newbie, one hopes, can acquire a clue on the installment plan even if he can't afford to buy one for cash; the cretin is merely stupid and/or irritating; the troll makes a fool out of himself by making a fool out of you, the @$$hole is, well, simply that. But a TRUE net.kook has a special fascination derived from his/her/its utter ineffability. Their behavior is irrational, if not downright weird, but they are seldom merely boring.

It is not considered appropriate to nominate clueless newbies, trolls, or longwinded spambrains as net.kooks. It is acceptable to nominate net.cretins, or simply to present them, without nomination, for whatever minor amusement value they may have; but the real focus here is on net.kooks in all their raging, indomitable glory.

Important Disclaimer: the fact that someone has been proclaimed a net.kook does not imply any psychological diagnosis in and of itself. A net.kook may or may not be clinically insane; that is not the concern of the AUK audience.

We hope.

7. Can you show me a few examples?

I'd rather not, but it may help to clarify things... The person who posted a handful of meaningless, ill-formed newgroup messages on May 21, 1994 was a Clueless Newbie. The person who hung around alt.religion.kibology during April and May 1994, constantly posting boilerplate "warning" messages telling people that ARK messages were intentionally meaningless, was a net.cretin. The people who post demented "scientific" theories, like Archimedes Plutonium's concept of the universe being one giant atom of plutonium, and seem incorrigible to criticism, are moderate net.kooks. The sort of being who constantly raves about the conspiracy against her/him/it is an extreme net.kook, especially if he/she/it automatically assumes that anyone who questions their world-view is an agent of the conspirators or is an ultra right-wing/left-wing extremist, and hides behind an anonymous remailer to avoid "persecution" even though they would get one hell of a lot less of it by not posting at all.

http://www.insurgent.org/~jhd/kookway.htm

8. How do I present a Kook on this group?

The preferred technique is to get the suspected Kook to start posting to AUK so that we can all see him/her/it in all their first-hand Glory. You can do this by posting followups to the suspect's weirder messages, with your followups nonchalantly crossposted to AUK. If the suspect responds to your messages without editing the Newsgroups line, you've achieved your goal.

Another acceptable method is to repost, complete and unedited, one or two of the suspected Kook's recent rants. If you do this, please provide a brief intro in the header describing what the hell you're doing, such as indicating who this person is, what group you found the message on, or why you think the rest of us should give a rat's @$$ about it.

You should be aware that if you try this with some perfectly reasonable posting, you may be flamed to net.hell and back and probably suspected of being a net.loon yourself. It is also considered extremely lame to nominate someone as a Kook simply because you have lost, or at least failed to win, a debate with them; persistently doing so is likely to get you nominated for Kook Awards. That someone fails to perceive the self-evident, unassailable wisdom of your viewpoint does not, in and of itself, constitute Kookery.

9. What are the Kook Awards?

The newsgroup alt.usenet.kooks offers a variety of widely-recognized and highly dubious honors for your service, applying to net.kooks everywhere. They recognize several kinds and many levels of net.kookery.

Here is a detailed list of AUK awards and descriptions.

http://www.netcabal.com/auk/awards.html

10. Who the FSCK appointed YOU net.kookologist/god/nazi etc.

Nobody. We have a Gift.

11. Are there any holidays in AUK?

Why yes, there sure are:

March 30th - CALL to ARMMs

Commemorating the earliest most virulent Kook post flood of Usenet, and the great flamewar that followed in its wake.

June 26th - KOOKS DAY

Named in commemoration of Earl Curley checking into the Motel Deep 6 to serve a major in the pine penalty box, the same date as Edmond Wollmann got arrested riding the San Clemente railway...on his motorcycle.

August 15th - DEAD DOC TAVISH DAY

Named in honor of the death of one of Usenet's most famed identities due to excessive Usenet exposure; his virtual corpse is buried in a rural cemetery near New Bremen, Texas

September 10th - KAZOO DAY

This holiday commemorates Raymond Ronald "Kazoo" Karczewski's conviction for seven felonies. May Raymold be a warning to all kooks who are tempted to think that a "Sovereign Christ" is above the law.

December 20th - AUK BIRTHDAY

The anniversary of the newgrouping of alt.usenet.kooks

12. What should I do if I'm paged on the Red Courtesy Telephone?

Give the caller Gandalf the Gray's speech to the demon. Verbatim.

13. Is alt.usenet.kooks archived anywhere?

Why would you even want to know? [But if you truly must know, GIYF. You masochist, you.]

14. What should we do about the book?

Burn it.

15. Where can I find out more about net.kooks?

Several mini-FAQs on classic kooks of the past and present (along with several non-kooky legendary netters) are available on the World Wide Web in various archives. Be sure to set aside coffee and cats before reading. [Try insurgent.org/kook-faq/]

16. What are the AUK Offices?

As well as the kook awards, kooks may compete to hold office for a month or longer. Nominations are made in exactly the same way as for awards; the difference is that the previous holder of the office always appears on the ballot paper when a new candidate emerges, and the winner remains in office until challenged again. At present, the offices are as follows.

Darth Bawl -

This office is held by Usenet's biggest crybaby.

Village Idiot -

The name says it all.

Kooki Information Minister -

Named in honour of Iraq's Mohammed Saeed al-Sahhaf, this office is held by the kook whose claims are most noticeably at variance with known facts.

Ministry of Circle Jerks -

Although many kooks are lone wolves, a few like to make friends with those who are as delusional as themselves. This office rewards the slurpfests that often ensue.

17. Are there any net.kook awards outside of AUK?

At various points of time there have been several, from the Christian groups' Steebie Award to alt.fan.art-bell's Angstrom Medal. At least two newsgroups, talk.politics.guns and comp.systems.mac.advocacy, have given out their own Kook of the Month awards. Check around from time to time to see what other net.kook awards might be around. [alt.atheism does them, too.]

18. What is the Cabal?

From the beginning of Usenet time, there has been but one force capable of holding it in check to remain in the realm of mortal existence. For today's Usenet world you need a Giant. A Behemoth. A Cabal of IMMENSE PROPORTIONS. A REALLY BIG CABAL to offer all news ORDER.

Within this force is the most ruthless and efficient organization on all Usenet, known as the Cabal Obsidian Order (COO). If YOU wish to know of this entity, read, learn, and do as you will.

SEE THE LIGHT OF COLLECTIVE WISDOM!!!

A. I SAID, what is the CABAL?

There Is No Cabal. Long Live The Cabal.

B. How does the Cabal function??

As well as any apocryphal organization can hope to function.

C. What are the weaknesses of the Cabal?

<chortle> What weaknesses?

D. What is the hierarchy and power structure of the Cabal?

Oh, you don't need to know that. Really. You can trust us, especially when it comes to information you haven't paid for.

E. What is the Cabal Obsidian Order?

The Cabal Obsidian Order (COO) is a profoundly secret collective of operatives designed to outrun, outgun and Eliminate the most vile scum and villainy the net has to offer.

F. How do I know if the COO is responsible for something?

If the COO's operatives are doing their job correctly, they'll be laughing at whoever is actually responsible.

G. Who are the leaders of the COO?

Leaders? Where we function we don't need Leaders.

H. What is the Beer Fund?

The more you contribute to it, the more we will tell you.

I. How may I apply to become an operative of the COO?

Pitiful begging at the Vote Wrangler's feet might help. Then again it might not.

19. Who is the FNVW?

Why, our highly esteemed Friendly Neighbourhood Vote Wrangler (FNVW), whose benevolent supreme dictatorship runs the electoral wheels of our great realm. Seven fearless folk have served, with distinction:

AUK VOTE WRANGLERS

Craig Dickson (1994-1995)
Matthew Legare (1995-1997)
Killfile Daemons (1997)
Robbie Honerkamp (1997-1998)
Phoenix (1997-2004)
Peter J Ross (2004-2006)
Sean Monaghan (2006-Present)

On retirement, Phoenix accepted the high office of Friendly Neighborhood "Bob"father.

20. Do I have what it takes to BE a Vote Wrangler?

<chortle> If you have to ask, you don't have what it takes.

21. Who do you %$#@!s think you are to oppose ME, Lord High Poster-Child of the Macrocosmic Universe?

We are the ones who can and will humiliate your @$$ if you use our group as your personal piss bowl. You are a freak of the universe. You do not give the orders here. And whether you like it or not, the universe is laughing behind your back.

22. That was MEAN, just plain MEAN!!!

Payback's a bitch, ain't it?

23. Should I expect ONE CONSISTENT response to my rude and obnoxious online behavior from the denizens of AUK?

Absolutely NOT.

24. To whom should I complain if I think I have been treated unfairly?

<Darth Vader>
You think you have been treated unfairly? </Darth Vader>

25. What kind of response can I expect as a result of my stupid online behavior at AUK?

Guilty party receives one or a combination thereof of the following assorted reactions (not at all limited to these, mind you):

1. Complete silence while we blow you off
2. Complete silence while we reload
3. Complete silence while we pull the plug on your account
4. Complete silence while we sleep at the switch
5. Complete silence while we sleep in our beds
6. Complete silence while we laugh behind your back
7. Complete silence while we wipe the splattered food and/or drinks off our screens
8. Complete silence while we contemplate the known macrocosmic universe
9. Complete silence while the Vote Wrangler pays good money to watch professional Denver teams find new ways to lose
10. Complete silence while we bask in the pure glow of our obnoxiously self-righteous selves
11. Complete silence while we play high-stakes poker with Snoopy, Spike, Andy, Olaf, Marbles and Woodstock
12. Complete silence while we never notice your NoCeM'd post
13. Complete silence while we never notice your spam-canceled post
14. Complete silence while we run your rude and obnoxious posts through goofyizers for reposting
15. Complete silence while the Trekkies among us watch the USS Defiant blast bad guys' ships into rubble and fly through the debris with that nice halo of sparks effect
16. Complete silence while we wait for our Gates-sponsored software systems to uncrash themselves
17. General laughter at your expense
18. General laughter and pointing at your expense
19. General laughter, pointing and personal insults at your expense
20. Someone exposes your true service provider to the Rabble
21. Someone does any of 1-20 and reports you to your state's Attorney General
22. Someone does any of 1-21 and reports you to the FBI National Computer Crime Squad (nccs@fbi.gov)
23. Someone does any of 1-22 and does highly amusing parodies of you during the entire process
24. Talk amongst ourselves about life, love and why they sell 8-hot-dog weenie sets with 10-bun packages
25. Sounds of awe as we wonder with dropped mouths how you were able to make a greater fool of yourself than you already had
26. Sounds of astonishment as we MARVEL at the FREAK
27. Flames in your generally specific direction
28. Flames of you in the third, fourth and fifth person
29. Flames from the Vote Wrangler from the other side of the Galactic Killfile just to annoy all hell out of you
30. Nominations for many noteworthy Kook awards

26. Can I really be kicked off my ISP for...

Being a total @$$hole?

If you try hard enough.

Top-posting like the pathetic imbecile that I am?

Usually not, but we can always try.

Forging someone else's valid e-mail address?

Absolutely.

Posting multiple copies of the same message to individual news groups (Excessive Multi Posting [EMP])?

Of course. It's the SPAMMING, stupid.

27. Can I really be thrown in jail for posting threatening messages?

Yes. People have been tried and convicted for sending threatening or harassing Email or Usenet posts. We do NOT support censorship of the Internet; however, posting a message stating you are going to cause virtual or unvirtual harm to someone will probably gain you a visit from your Friendly Neighborhood FBI Agent.

28. Fine. I'll just remain anonymous. That'll work, right?

BWWAAAAAAAAA HA HA HA HA HA HA HA HA HA!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Try it, pinkboy. An anon remailer service can be forced to turn you in for copyright violation, harassment, stalking; you name the crime - they've got the time. If you ran an anon remailer service what would be the point of protecting flagrant abusers of the net and the Law??

29. Okay, then I'll bust your #$%&$*!! @$$ off AUK instead!

Uh... yeah. Many denizens of AUK are abuse admins, know abuse admins, sleep with abuse admins, or otherwise have years of experience dealing with and educating others about precisely your kind of dubiosity. A good account is a terrible thing to waste, so don't sacrifice yours on our altar.

30. I just realized I am a Maroon. How can I improve my standing in the eyes of the Internet, my balloon doll, and, most importantly, "Bob"?

REPENT. The End is always near.

They are awash in their self-proclaimed glory after they posed as an not fuilfilling the words they tell the victims online in their chats.

Why don't you read it where they tell these victims of their deceit

I say Amateur Radio does perform service to the country. Not just "can", but "does".

Even if all Amateur Radio does is provide a back-up communications system, that's a service.

Some amateurs certainly overstate things about amateur radio.

However, to say that Amateur Radio performs no service to the country is incorrect.

When was that?

Cell phones are certainly useful for "minor emergencies". I've made a few 911 calls from mine.

Where cell phones have a problem is when too many people in the same area try to use them simultaneously, exceeding the system capacity.

Public service isn't just about emergencies. Emergency communications is just one part of how Amateur Radio provides service to the country.

Finding as much wreckage as possible could help prevent another shuttle disaster.

So providing communications to the searchers was a service to the country - even though it wasn't an emergency.

Service is about more than emergencies. The radio services listed by Len include some which are not primarily about emergencies.

Here's a first-person account of a radio amateur who helped with the Columbia wreckage search:

There you have it. Len acts surprised when he is called on his actions. He complains of being denigrated and insulted, but he denigrates and insults. He is the Rodney Dangerfield of r.r.a.p. in complaining of getting no respect, but he is no respecter of those in disagreement with him. He is the first to complain when someone calls him a name, but the first one to use made-up names to others. Len is the embodiment of the N2EY profile of his actions. He cannot help himself and he cannot help the cause in which he has appointed himself advocate.

Radio amateurs will be using morse code long after you are gone, Leonard. Hams will still be performing public service and emergency communications. They'll be working DX and ragchewing. They'll be handling message traffic. You can't be a part of it after your departure and you aren't a part of it now.

Leonard Anderson, sidewalk superintendent of amateur radio.

I have followed these pointless and immature threads until now.

Here is an an answer to your question. CAP has nothing whatsoever to do with whatever tripe is being produced in this thread. The contents of a silly newsgroup or whatever individual members of that organization post in response to newsgroups is none of CAP's concern, nor do they care. It is simply not germaine to their mission, purpose, nor does it support, endorse or NOT endorse the goings-on on the web. It is the same thing as a police officer yelling, "the sky is falling" and expecting the city that employs him to be responsible when it does not fall!

That organization has nothing to do with this crap, is not responsible for the arguments contained herein, nor does it give a damn about any speculation about what an alleged member may be posting on the WWW. So long as a person who happens to be a member of any organization follows the rules of that organization in the context of their actual participation in such group, it is none of said group's business and they could not care less!!!! So give it up. The entire thread is childish, pointless and serves no point other than trying to play king-of-the-hill.

not at all pointless it serves to punish Robeson and employees basic miliatray tactics something the officers of CAP are ignorant of (if robeson is any example

Ina ddition anyone that comes accross Robeson psoting now and Rodney Dangerfield had merit...he was a talented humorist who brought smiles to many. Len "ain't" the Rodney Dangerfield of the News Groups. There is no comparison.

Len has no merit save for how he perceives himself, is humorless, and brings smiles to nobody but to his own, smug self.

If respondees were to simply ignore his Gaseous Emissions, Len would all too soon be bereft of targets at which to aim his "humor".
This would leave Len with nobody but his Myna bird with whom to commiserate, and since the Myna bird is of doubtful intellect, that leaves Len with an audience of .5 (.5 being less that one).

Just what makes a person an "asset to the ham radio service"? That sounds just as stupid as an "asset to the telephone service". Like it or not, ham radio is just a means of communication that has world-wide reach. Listen up, the "ham radio service" isn't some illustrious organization. It's just a means for people around to world to chat live. It can have great value in some emergencies, but most of it's use is idle chatter.

"miliatray tactics "???? "occicers"?

What is that?
Boy, is "wismen" going to have fun with this one!
He does claim to be an Air Force veteran of four years, just as Mork claims to have been part of a field artillery unit, so Woger will have his say and Woger may even know the meaning of "miliatray tactics ".

Psssssst! I hate to break this to you, but if you are lucky enough to Every amateur transmission is a service to the country?

A back-up provides exactly the same kind of service as the service that is being backed up.

Does amateur radio provide that?

How many years were the shuttles grounded? Lots of time to collect the

I disagree. Where is the surprise?

I think Len expects that you'll attempt to denigrate him as you've

Of course not.

> A back-up provides exactly the same kind of service as the service that > is being backed up.

Not necessarily. A backup provides a service that can replace the service that is being backed up, but may not be exactly the same. For example, when the electrical utility service fails, many people will depend on candles, lanterns and flashlights for lighting. Those things aren't exactly the same as what is backed up but they do the job. Of course a whole-house backup generator is preferable and will deliver backup electricity that is almost the same as the utility.

For an Amateur Radio example, two Red Cross facilities may usually communicate supply lists by email. If their email fails, Amateur Radio could step in with WinLink and provide a very similar service. But if WinLink is not available, the lists could be sent by radio amateurs using PSK31, voice or, yes, even Morse Code. All depends on what's available at the time. Getting a list that was sent by voice and is hand-written might not be exactly the same as getting it by email, but it will do until the email is working again.

> Does amateur radio provide that?

Sometimes (WinLink vs. email) but not usually. But a backup that is exactly the same as the backed-up service is not essential. In fact, if the backup is exactly the same, what you have is redundancy.

I don't read much of rrap. They're simply too much volume and too little time. I stopped reading rrap completely for several months because of all the noise, and reverted to just posting the ARS license numbers for a while.

Which reminds me - time for the next post in that thread.

Yes! The problem is that cell phone communications may not be available when most needed.

Massive cell phone system failure can occur when power fails for an extended time and the backup power runs out.

But the longer the wreckage was out in the weather, the less information could be had from it, and the harder it would be to find.
Plus the sooner any information could be gathered, the sooner it could be acted upon.

"Service to the country" is one reason for the continued existence of the Amateur Radio Service.

Now a question:

- Does the fact that Amateur Radio "provides service to the country" mean that the ARS is more than "just a hobby"?

I had quit following this mundane thread for a while, looking in only on occasion. I must wonder - it is being "recommended" "apparently" by "slow code" to raise the CW rates to 13wpm General and 20wpm Extra.
DUH - we "were" there already.

I've said before and I'll say it again. I'm not a "code" lover, but I've learned it and used it and sometimes listen to it. Will it save a life? Probably not - but still - the chance is there just the same as for any other mode. You use what you have available. CODE did NOT keep the crap off the ham bands, so to put it back in or KEEP it in, is sort of useless to argue about. While "I" think 5 wpm is about as easy as you're going to get - it seems far too many still cry about it. Yes, you could make the written tests tougher - but that sucks too - because in a sense - they're "not" any tougher when you're being given the answers in a book. And most of those books cover "just" enough to pass the exams - they by no means "teach" you electronics. In days gone by - you had to have at least a basic grasp of electronics to be able to pass the exams. I'm not saying you had to be a "Technician" with years of experience - I'm saying you had to know more than these books teach. At that time - you had NO clue what the FCC would ask. I've still got sample study guides sent by the FCC if asked - and they were "vague".

CODE, EXAMS - nothing will keep the riffraff off the bands. This is a lawless society anymore - people do as they damned well please. CB got quiet in many areas not due to Cell Phones - it happened long before. It happened in many places based on what I've learned - because of the garbage. Ham will be the same way if it isn't respected. We're in a NO WIN situation.

I find it amazing, people with illegal amps and radios will defend them to the hilt - like a murderer caught with a smoking gun - claiming his/her innocence. If the government agency deems them illegal - then they are - no excuses. Just like the speed laws - if the road is marked 25, that is what it is - plain and simple. If we all took responsbility for our actions - maybe things wouldn't be so damned bad. I know lots of cbers who got out of cb BECAUSE those with the illegal amps and radios "splashed" so bad, they couldn't even talk on the radio. So, tell me again - how those illegal radios and amps are helping? Hams have a rule of using the minimum necessary to carry out the communications. IT DOES WORK! QRP (Low Power) is part of the challenge! 500- 1000 watts or more - any dummy can do. If you want to be known as an "Alligator" station - ALL mouth and NO ears.... keep using that garbage. Who wants to talk to them? That is as irritating as static on an AM radio station. Listen to Channel 6 on the CB - there is a guy who constantly talks - HOW he hears anyone is beside me. I think he talks just to hear himself talk. AND being he is in the south, he has to be running some power. If everyone operated like that, the bands would be total chaos, no one talking to anyone - only to themselves. How the FCC hasn't busted him yet - is amazing.

Just my 2 cents.

Remember the "No child left behind" policy of our educators of some years ago? What you are seeing today is largely a result of that philosophy. No responsibility, accountability or respect for others or oneself.

I worked as a radio dispatcher in the Air Force during my Sixties tour. That was the foundation of my radio experience. I owned a CB set for a year before I actually transmitted. The style was so alien and "cutesy" it made me want to barf. Then the syntheisized 40 channel rigs came out and everyone could afford one. End of CB for me.

I then went on to get my commercial ticket with radar endorsement. A year later I got a ham ticket and two years later I got my Extra. Code does not come easy for me. It was a constant uphill battle to pass the 20 wpm code test. But eventually I passed it.

Turning on the radio today, there are still some good folks on ham radio and not all of them are old timers. But a lot of the same types that ruined CB and now ruining ham radio. I can't remember the last time that I actually transmitted with my station. I'm about ready to sell it off and chalk it up to history.

Amplifiers are not intrinsically bad. Abusing amplifiers is bad. If you work 75 or 80 meter telephony, an amp is an absolute must have, especially if you have a less than full size dipole at a decent height.

I enjoyed ham radio more when folks knew a bit about electronics. It gave us something to talk about that we all hand in common. Ditto CW. No one had more trouble learning CW than me, believe me. It still gives me a headache to operate CW for more than a few minutes, but I wanted that Extra Class ticket and that was the only way to get it back then.

You do? How about that? Might it be that I've stated that I'll treat him as he treats me? As soon as he starts with the "mighty macho

"Foghorn Lenhorn" or "Major Hoople". Otherwise, I've called him "Len" or "Leonard".

Jim has never used an derogatory names in addressing Len. Look where it has gotten him. The guy uses his cornball humor, denigrates Jim in general and accuses him of lacking "GUTS" because he hasn't revealed where he works. Len's a grumpy old guy with too much time on his hands and nothing with which to fill it. He has decided to reform something in which he has no stake. His two homes (no mortgage), nice car, television and comfortable income are enough to keep him out of mischief.

I disagree. Rodney complained that he got no respect and when he did so, he was funny. Len complains of getting no respect and when he does it, he is funny. The only difference is that Rodney intended to be funny.

These are the numbers of current, unexpired amateur radio licenses held by individuals on the stated dates, and the percentage of the total number of active licenses that class contains:

As of May 14, 2000:

Novice - 49,329 (7.3%)
Technician - 205,394 (30.4%)
Technician Plus - 128,860 (19.1%)
General - 112,677 (16.7%)
Advanced - 99,782 (14.8%)
Extra - 78,750 (11.7%)

Total Tech/TechPlus - 334,254 (49.5%)

Total General/Advanced/Extra - 291,209 (43.2%)

Total all classes - 674,792

As of September 15, 2006:

Novice - 24,429 (3.7%) [decrease of 24,900]
Technician - 285,226 (43.4%) [increase of 79,832]
Technician Plus - 35,774 (5.4%) [decrease of 93,087]
General - 132,056 (20.1%) [increase of 19,379]
Advanced - 70,886 (10.8%) [decrease of 28,896]
Extra - 108,374 (16.5%) [increase of 29,624]

(percentages may not add up to exactly 100.0% due to rounding)

Total Tech/TechPlus - 321,000 (48.9%) [decrease of 13,254]

Total General/Advanced/Extra - 311,316 (47.4%) [increase of 20,107]

Total all classes - 656,745 (decrease of 18,047)

Note that these totals do not include licenses that have expired but are in the grace period.

They also do not include club, military, RACES or other station-only licenses.

Note also that effective April 15, 2000, new Novice, Technician Plus and Advanced licenses are no longer issued.

Since April 15, 2000, FCC has renewed all existing Technician Plus licenses as Technician. It is therefore informative to consider the totals of the two classes, since the Technician class includes a significant number of Technician Plus licenses renewed as Technician.

If by the "Patriot Amendment" you mean this:

http://en.wikinews.org/wiki/President_Bush_to_limit_congressional_oversight_in_PATRIOT_amendment_act

the answer is that it looks like an attempt by the Current Occupant to remove safeguards.

And it's not just Democrats:

Quoting Wikinews:

Sen. Lindsey Graham voiced concern over the way national security is being used as a catch all phrase in this and a number of other signing statements, saying "If you take this to its logical conclusion, because during war the commander in chief has an obligation to protect us, any statute on the books could be summarily waived,"

Sen. Graham is a Republican from South Carolina.

It seems like the word "Patriot" gets attached to all sorts of things in an attempt to avoid criticism or scrutiny.

Heh heh heh heh heh heh heh....

Seems like I shook the nitroglycerine bottle that is the mighty macho morseman's ego with that entrapment. :-) KABLOOIE!!!

Poor Jimmy, all flustered, thought he'd "gotten to me." Poor baby, he doesn't check the Federal Register often enough.

On 7 July 2006 the Federal Register made available FR Doc 06-6013
[ET Docket 06-119; FCC 06-831 on the FCC website]. That was a 52 page report by the 27 member panel (1 chair, 26 members), written single-spaced, narrow margins, members all identified by their affiliations on pp 51-52. That was several weeks ago.

In FR Doc 06-6013 there is ONE short paragraph about "amateur radio involvement" on page 29 (upper half of page). There is a single statement on page 45 about "waiver of regulations" for amateur radio AND other communications services. That's it.

Had FR Doc 06-6013 been formatted in conventional manuscript style (double-spaced, wide margins) it would have been a bit larger than 150 pages in length. :-)

Mr. professional-in-some-kind-of-electronics thinks "I should" read that report. :-) I already did, weeks ago, when it was available to the public.

What professional-in-some-kind-of-electronics Jimmy FAILED to mention is thousands and thousands of pages of OTHER text in both popular press and professional trade magazines on the tremendous task of getting New Orleans somewhat functional after a major disaster where the state, city of New Orleans was INADEQUATELY PREPARED AT ALL LEVELS (including amateurs) to provide ANY adequate service for its citizens. The surviving services did as best they could with work-arounds, hampered by the city of New Orleans being built below sea level with INADEQUATE protection against dike breaching (which did happen, causing major, major flooding).

>> Even if all Amateur Radio does is provide a back-up communications >> system, that's a service.
>A back-up provides exactly the same kind of service as the service that >is being backed up.
>Does amateur radio provide that?

Seldom. By law it CANNOT provide the SAME service as broadcasting, multiplexed-circuit communications as in the telephone infrastructure, and NOT in the high speed of data transfer NOW COMMON to MOST communications services on the OUTSIDE of amateur radio.

Yes, amateur radio does provide "health and welfare" message relay and some 'phone patches' to the public...provided those amateur radio services are ABLE TO SURVIVE a major environmental disaster. The ARRL failed to "report" on all the amateur radio facilities that did NOT SURVIVE Katrina (wouldn't be good for their wish-fulfillment of members to report that).

Yes, amateur radio DID provide SOME communications AFTER Katrina had hit. "Health and welfare" messages and some scattered 'phone patching on the OUTSKIRTS of New Orleans.
NONE of that amateur radio communications effort happened DURING the height of a REAL emergency situation and the start of the flooding immediately afterwards. [refer to the stock video shots such as dozens of bright yellow school busses sitting in a flooded bus park, empty, up to their hubcaps in water...busses that could have been driven by most drivers to help evacuate flood victims, but were NOT, just ignored by almost everyone there]

"Health and welfare" messaging is emotional sustenance to family and friends of disaster victims. But, let's face it, it is NOT ESSENTIAL to saving lives of the victims, does NOT help repair damange, does NOT evacuate any victims, does NOT do any lasting service to victims other than to provide copy for ARRL news pages.

Did Mr. Professional-in-some-kind-of-electronics provide HIS personal "service to the country" during or after Katrina?
He never said boo about it. He HAS jabbered about his "service in 'other' ways" (to the nation) but has NEVER explained those "other ways" in any sort of detail.

Hurricane Katrina was a severe disaster, unprecedented in recent times (including time hurricanes had routinely hit Florida). The 'preparations for emergencies' in the New Orleans area were later revealed to be miniscule (if not abyssmal and poorly planned. That apparently INCLUDED amateur radio 'preparations;' the ARRL is strangely silent on that aspect.

Normally, the REAL emergency services and radio services OTHER than amateur radio are available 24/7 all over the nation. Here is what I wrote previously on those:

My wife and I were in the upper midwest when Katrina hit the Gulf states' coastline last year. Outside of Katrina being the major focus of the news, NOTHING affected our stay there. The remaining weather disturbance reaching the upper midwest DID cause us to change plans on the return trip. My wife handled all the reservation changes via cell phone from inside the car while I was driving through Iowa and on into Nevada. Excellent service on that. No roadway or motel or restaurant services were affected. On the 2000 mile return trip we saw only two incidents of accidents of others, both attended to by existing infrastructure public safety and towing services.

Brian, that is anathema to the morseodist supermen of the ARRL persuasion. A "no-no" in common speech. The ARRL is always right, can never be wrong...

In ANY emergency, ANY communications service facility is useful.
One uses whatever is there at the time. The FCC recognizes this in Part 1 of Title 47 C.F.R. in regards to ALL radio services' operations in the event of a REAL emergency.

any radio is useless there when the roof pieces fall...]

Jimmy has tunnel vision. He would be at home in Boston in the tunnel complex...if it weren't so "violent." :-)

Oops! Jimmy allow no violence! I forgot. He would interpret falling concrete roof slabs as "MY (violent) ERROR!" :-)

Not in Jimmyworld. In emergencies ALL infrastructure comms FAIL and ONLY amateur radio can save the day. Sigh...

Amateurs and amateur radio equipment SURVIVES the harshest environments and is ready-and-able to SERVE 24/7 !

The "service" aspect is largely confined to refills of the pipe that some smoke while dreaming in front of their radios.

Apparently some feel guilt about enjoying a hobby - or just inadequate - and try to pretend they are much more important than just hobbyists. Some pretend to be professionals in an amateur activity.

Mr. Professional-in-SOME-kind-of-work seems to have overlooked both the NASA statements immediately after the fact, the many,
many pages of news and information about the shuttle disaster,

the probable cause of disintegration (number one suspect on day one of the tragedy...by the pros involved). The "footprint" of the breakup was spread over three states in a known path. The bodies of all astronauts on board were recovered as well as over 80 percent of the spaceframe. Pictures of the wreckage laid out in order in a hangar in Florida were printed in Aviation Week & Space Technology. The vast majority of the wreckage pieces were found by ordinary citizens, ones who have not been granted amateur radio licenses.

The ACTUAL communications services were done by existing infrastructure agencies...everyone from local PDs to the Forest Service that could be spared from regular work. CITIZENS, most of whom had NO radio licenses, helped the wreckage recovery efforts on their own, no ham license required.

Here is what was originally written:

Torquemada Jim: "Are you saying that amateur radio does not perform any service to the country?"

My reply: "Encapsulated in the briefest meaning, YES."

KABLOOIE! Jimmy HAD to explode in a torrent of "errors."
Gotta love it...push just one button and he detonates.
:-) [...this is more fun than a barrel of morseodists]

FIFTY TWO PAGES WORTH, released 7 Jul 06, got it fresh from the GPO website when it was released. Interesting but wordy.

Re-skim-reading it, I did NOT see the "importance to the country" in such glowing, endearing, patriotic terms. That's probably due to being just an ordinary citizen, having served my country in the military during a time of war, working as a professional in radio-electronics...not in the "transport industry" or busy, busy with manual telegraphy. :-)

US amateur radio is an interesting avocational aspect of the entire radio world. It can be fun to most of the hobbyists.
But, a few, like Mr. Professional-in-some-kind-of-whatever,
wrap themselves in too much patriotic bunting...they can't see through that or the many flags they wave about themselves. Pity that, only saplings pretending to be mature trees, unable to see the forest.

[watch the outrageous vituperation flow in now... :-)]

It's so expected that one can use the phrase "take it to the bank"!

Poor Dave, still upset about cashews in Guinea-Bisseau and unable to "synchronize his teleprinters." :-)

That IS possible. Back a number of years on a large local BBS called "Talk Channel," one guy pretended he had a "girlfriend" so strongly that he even took out a subscription for "her" and posted messages in both identities. Eventually the Sysop found out and kicked them "both" off, refunding what was left of "their" subscriptions. :-) Strange person...even in-person.

Yes, we need a new set of bums who will vote our way, and pass legislation guaranteeing every American the right to put up a radio antenna entirely free of legal and contractual restrictions.

You're right. Looking at the time stamps on your original message and Markie's follow-up, it took him exactly 14 minutes to respond. It would have been less than 10 minutes but most of the time was used in figuring out how to spell "at."

So who's the stalker now, Markie?

Speaking of which, Markie...you advised me to "get a life or get laid"
a while back. Was that a proposition? Pardon me for being slow on the uptake but, unlike you, I'm not used to getting hit on by males.

True. However, when you post on an open message board you open yourself up to any and all who wish to either support or rebut your postings. RRAP and similar boards are not held to the same standards as private e-mail.

In other words, Toad, if you want to play lumberjack, learn to handle your end of the log.

Over here in Marshall, IL, somebody can be heard jamming the crap out of Omega One Radio. It's probably that guy who said he would jam you in another newsgroup message. Being as you are part 15, you have no right to complain about jamming because you have to protection from it.

You should just pull the plug. Nobody can hear your station any more anyway.

Oh, I see,

So those folks that died in WWII on submarine patrol were not serving their country? I can take you to some of their graves.

So the CAP volunteers are in 'no way' (to correct your spelling) serving our Nation when they took the first survey photos of the Twin Towers after they fell? Guess who were the ONLY others flying beside the military and one flight on a rescue mission (snake bite).

They are not serving the Nation when they fly Drug Interdiction mission, some of whom, yes, have DIED in that service?

The CAP chaplains who were called upon to fill in for chaplains who were mustered to Iraq and Afghanistan were/are not SERVING the Nation when they, tho volunteers, in effect, went on active duty at US bases all over the country?

Oh Puh-LEASE!!! Once again, CAP has nothing to do with the silly arguments and posturing that goes on on the WWW by blustering, immature "men" anymore than a city has responsibility for a cop posting the SAME kind of stuff that goes on here or on other websites. The WWW is a place where mostly men go to joust with each other, "fight" with other, insult each other without any physical harm. They, for the most part, do not act the same way in person, in business, in relationships. This petty arguing and jousting is just pointless posturing for position. NO organization is represented,or is responsible for the actions of people who may be part of a club, fraternity, or quasi-military auxiliary.

As for CAP, it is made of honorable, hard-working volunteers who often give up FAR more than we ever know in order to serve. They don't get paid for serving; they PAY to serve. And pay some more. And more. They pay to fly searches. They buy radios and equipment. They attend weekend training sessions. And do it willingly. The Guard and Reserve get PAID while those CAP members PAY to serve--something many of us are too selfish to do! I am a bit put out by your insinuations and implied duplicity in wrongdoing or malfeasance on the part of CAP and my friends who have served, are serving, and have died doing so. I may not agree with actions of individuals whose posting may not jibe with your views, but their affiliations are not to be used to denigrate an organization who probably is not even aware of a member's web activities. It is a cheap shot used to bolster a weak position tet a tet two or more people who ought to know better. Mature men would not be engaged in this, and I am now finished with this. :(

I honestly can't tell whether you are being facetious or not, but you've struck upon my rawest nerve.

Whatever happened to personal property rights in the US? Since when can't a person do anything within reason on their own property? CC&R's were originally meant to keep people from stacking trash a mile deep or parking junk cars on their lawns in perpetuity. This is fine. When they started telling people they couldn't have a TV antenna, satellite dish or ham/cb antenna, as well as what color they could paint their house and whether they could have a tacky lawn gnome, I think they went too far. People are far too easily offended by the stupidest things these days. Grow a SKIN, folks. It's a free country (debatably).

Yes, Sen Graham is a Republican from South Carolina. Are you from South Carolina? Does Sen Graham represent you?

And GW could have declared martial law on 9/11. He's trying to go the least disruptive route for the most people. Most people aren't terrorists.

Since the birth of this nation, the US Post Office has been looking at the addressee and the return address on every piece of first class mail that they've handled. The government even goes so far as to walk right up to the addressee, even if private property, and give them their message.

And if something suspicious shows up in the US Mail, the Postmaster is allowed to open it. The sender and the receiver are both subject to investigation.

Today, under the "Patriot Act," the US Government gets to see the originating phone number, the destination phone number, and if there are suspicious trigger words, the contents of the message may be seen.

I think the two systems of communications should share similar risks of eavesdropping. Why shouldn't it be so?

If you are choosing to afford terrorists equal protection, I think you're nuts.

Tsk, another fine example of a US radio amatuer to entice others into "working on the code" to get fame, fortune, and a ham license.

NOT.

When Dave doesn't get the respect he thinks he should get, he gets indignant.

I once left him off a list of A-1 Ops...

It took Markie 37 minutes to follow-up to you on this one. Mark must be a Good luck with it. :) You'll find CW is fun, rewarding and will add to your overall enjoyment of ham radio. See if there are people in your area that do on the air code practice sessions. If you have an HF receiver, you can tune in CW transmitions on lower portions of the bands.

You being a typical clueless CB'er and not able to understand schematics, it's only natural your dumb ass would toss them in a dumpster.

I listened to Omega at about 1900Z, didn't here any Jammin at that time.
I should run home and listen. What is it? A Warbler, A sweeper?
That's gotta sound a WHOLE lot better than Todd's Barry Manilow collection. LOL!

I wonder if Markie's "Moon Bounce" buddies shifted operation to 13.556.

You should team up with Markie then and have him provide the Pod-cast.
He's always on the net. He should be good at that as there's no typing involved.

And instead of calling it a Pod-Cast, you could call it a Todd-Cast.

Todd, you could take a break from the music and do like a little mini talk show. Maybe take questions off RRAP and answer them on air.

Or maybe just do a daily two hour monologue on how the FCC is unfair and how they're trying to silence your free speech, or how people got you booted off your ISP's, or how you're going to explain to the FCC that 15,000 microvolts at thirty meters really is kilowatt. LOL! You're hilarious.

I'd rather be a smartass than a dumb ass, Dumb Ass.

Lenny is full of hot air. It was hilarious watching the original poster

Then not all amateur transmissions are a service to the country.

Somehow Robesin thinks it's OK to say stuff like that.

Somehow, the other Extras ignore it.

Believe me, I'm not "knocking" amps, just the "evidenced" misuse (abuse) of them. Yes, they "do" have their use and place. But most of those using them "THINK" they have to "rule the airwaves" to converse. Their splattering ruins it for ALL.

The only way anyone can have you TOSsed is to complain. The ISP then looks at what they are complaining about and, whaddaya know, Toad IS sending virtual kiddie porn through their data stream! Bye, bye, Toad.

ISPs are very sensitive to that kind of stuff and tend to err on the side of caution. Miller decision or not, they don't want to possibly expose themselves to legal liability and the few bucks they make off of you every month isn't nearly enough to justify the risk (in their minds).

It's up to the ISP to actually determine whether you have committed a violation of their Terms of Service (in other words, committed breach of contract). If two ISPs independently came to the conclusion that the stuff you were putting through their data streams was a TOS violation, there had to be a good reason.

You read the First Amendment like you read Part 15 - it means what you want it to mean, not what it says.

The reason many people don't like Americans is because of people like you, Markie, who try to impose their silly, uninformed and illiterate views on everyone. You and the rest of the Inferior Five have irreparably trashed this newsgroup with your incessant flaming, and it is being read by people in other countries. How do you think that makes Americans look to the rest of the world? Not that you care, sociopath.

US amateur radio is an interesting avocational aspect of the entire radio world. It can be fun to most of the hobbyists.
But, a few, like Mr. Professional-in-some-kind-of-whatever,
wrap themselves in too much patriotic bunting...they can't
see through that or the many flags they wave about themselves. Pity that, only saplings pretending to be mature trees, unable to see the forest.

You're right. Looking at the time stamps on your original message and Markie's follow-up, it took him exactly 14 minutes to respond. It would have been less than 10 minutes but most of the time was used in figuring out how to spell "at."

So who's the stalker now, Markie?

Speaking of which, Markie...you advised me to "get a life or get laid"
a while back. Was that a proposition? Pardon me for being slow on the uptake but, unlike you, I'm not used to getting hit on by males.

YIKES! Mark did, after all, admit to being bisexual. That is a frightening thought.

Not true, these indiviuals are stalking and harassing me and had me alread removed from 2 internet providers and threatened if I go to any other service provider they would complain to them...that is stalking...nice try though!!

ROFL, He likes using two letter words because he has a 50% chance of spelling the correctly.

It took Markie 37 minutes to follow-up to you on this one. Mark must be a little bit constipated today, he's normally a lot faster than that.

funny you both fail to address the problem with CAP claiming that it upholds military coutesy to the armed forces and support the libeling fo the ARMED forces

Fact CAP has made it if Robeson remarks were directed at amemebr of CAP
he would be subject to displine

Fact his remarks libel several vets of the armed Myself My my fathe rinlaw oethers and CAP which claims to render honors to us refuses to displine him in these cases

Fact an Army officer would be displined if he ahd comitted the acts that Robeson has here on RRAP

Cap Does NOT extend military cutesy to the Armed dispites reobson claims to the contary

CAP currently dishonors the military forces of this nation and supports it memebrs doing so

Oh, I see,

So those folks that died in WWII on submarine patrol were not serving their country? I can take you to some of their graves.

So the CAP volunteers are in 'no way' (to correct your spelling) serving our Nation when they took the first survey photos of the Twin Towers after they fell? Guess who were the ONLY others flying beside the military and one flight on a rescue mission (snake bite).

They are not serving the Nation when they fly Drug Interdiction mission, some of whom, yes, have DIED in that service?

The CAP chaplains who were called upon to fill in for chaplains who were mustered to Iraq and Afghanistan were/are not SERVING the Nation when they, tho volunteers, in effect, went on active duty at US bases all over the country?

Oh Puh-LEASE!!! Once again, CAP has nothing to do with the silly arguments and posturing that goes on on the WWW by blustering, immature "men" anymore than a city has responsibility for a cop posting the SAME kind of stuff that goes on here or on other websites. The WWW is a place where mostly men go to joust with each other, "fight" with other, insult each other without any physical harm. They, for the most part, do not act the same way in person, in business, in relationships. This petty arguing and jousting is just pointless posturing for position. NO organization is represented,or is responsible for the actions of people who may be part of a club, fraternity, or quasi-military auxiliary.

As for CAP, it is made of honorable, hard-working volunteers who often give up FAR more than we ever know in order to serve. They don't get paid for serving; they PAY to serve. And pay some more. And more. They pay to fly searches. They buy radios and equipment. They attend weekend training sessions. And do it willingly. The Guard and Reserve get PAID while those CAP members PAY to serve--something many of us are too selfish to do! I am a bit put out by your insinuations and implied duplicity in wrongdoing or malfeasance on the part of CAP and my friends who have served, are serving, and have died doing so. I may not agree with actions of individuals whose posting may not jibe with your views, but their affiliations are not to be used to denigrate an organization who probably is not even aware of a member's web activities. It is a cheap shot used to bolster a weak position tet a tet two or more people who ought to know better. Mature men would not be engaged in this, and I am now finished with this. :(

Jerry, thank you for your well written response to, for the lack of a better term, an "ass clown".
Unfortunately your informative response will most likely be lost on this slow-witted individual.
Thanks for trying.

Sorry, dude. You're wrong again. You can't do a damn thing about interference, because Part 15 says that you have to accept it. Here's a direct quote. Let's see you weasel your way around the following:

--(begin quote)--

15.5 General conditions of operation.

(a) Persons operating intentional or unintentional radiators shall not be deemed to have any vested or recognizable right to continued use of any given frequency by virtue of prior registration or certification of equipment, or, for power line carrier systems, on the basis of prior notification of use pursuant to ï¿½ 90.63(g) of this chapter.

(b) Operation of an intentional, unintentional, or incidental radiator is subject to the conditions that no harmful interference is caused and *that interference must be accepted that may be caused by the operation *of an authorized radio station, by another intentional or unintentional *radiator, by industrial, scientific and medical (ISM) equipment, or by *an incidental radiator.

--(end quote)--

You'd better take a close look at 15.15(b) above, where I put asterisks in front of the important portion. The paragraph clearly states that, if someone else puts an intentional radiator on the air, and it causes interference to you, the law says "tough shit, BITCH WHORE NAZI." (It doesn't say it quite that way, but I wanted to put it into words you'd understand.)

I'm not from SC. But that's not the point.

The question you asked was why Democrats are/were so bothered by the Patriot Amendment. Which implies that Republicans aren't bothered by it, and that it's a partisan thing, with the usual spin of "Party A is good, Party B is bad". The fact that there are Republicans who are concerned demonstrates that ity's not so simple.

Guess where Sen. Arlen Specter is from....

> And GW could have declared martial law on 9/11.

Could he? For the whole country or just parts of it?

Maybe in theory. In practice, I don't know of any time in the history of the Republic where nationwide or even widespread martial law was imposed. The use of such power has always been very limited.

To declare martial law for the whole country in the wake of 9/11 would have been an overreaction.

> He's trying to go the > least disruptive route for the most people.

That's one way to look at it. Here's another:

If someone in power tries to make radical changes all at once, there is usually strong opposition. But if the changes are made in stages, a little at a time, they can often be packaged in such a way as to result in an overall change that is much more radical. A little here, a little there, and pretty soon an awful lot is gone.

The US Post Office is also a government-run organization - it's not private industry. Reading the addresses is a practical necessity, in order to know where to send the mail.

I thought the discussion was about the "Patriot Amendment".

"Eavesdropping"? I would call it "monitoring". And I agree that if a communication of any kind - written, "wired", radio, etc. - is suspicious, the govt. should be able to monitor it.

At the same time, there need to be safeguards against misuse of the monitoring. Checks and balances.

You may not remember the Nixon Administration, but I sure do. There were things done which were clear misuse of power, in order to insure that RMN got elected and re-elected. There were serious attempts to hide it under the umbrella of "national security".

The truly odd thing was that RMN did not need any of those 'dirty tricks' to get elected or re-elected.
> If you are choosing to afford terrorists equal protection, I think > you're nuts.

The problem isn't terrorists getting equal protection. If they're really terrorists, they should be dealt with as needed.

The problem is that while most people aren't terrorists, we all get looked at as if we are. And the safeguards start disappearing, one by one, always for "national security". Then there's no equal protection for anyone.

Is that what the USA is about?

Isn't the Army Corps of Engineers responsible for the levees? And the pumps?

Why weren't the professionals adequately prepared for the storm? It's not like hurricanes in the Gulf of Mexico are unusual.

Amateur radio emergency communications can be more than health and

Do you think that health and welfare traffic is all that amateur radio ever does in an emergency?

Do you think that health and welfare traffic is not a service to the country?

Where, exactly, did I ever write about my service "in other ways"?

Show us the exact quotes.

So what? NOLA is definitely in a hurricane zone. It's been below sea level for a very long time. There's no excuse for not being prepared.

"Normal" and "emergency" are opposites.

And your point is?

You seem to be saying that since you were hundreds of miles form NOLA and Katrina didn't really affect you, that amateur radio performs no service to the country.

And yet at least some of the search efforts were aided by amateur radio communication. That's proven by first-had accounts by amateurs who were there, doing the job.

While most people can unscramble Decatur and Charleston and locate them, Illiopolis could be a problem if you are not familiar with small towns in Illinois. It's just west of Decatur. I'm not quite sure how far though as I never had occasion to go there. I once lived in Niantic, a small town between Decatur and Illiopolis.

While that is true in your country, it is not yet true here. The international conference simply left it up to each individual country as to Incorrect.

Both NCVEC and NCI have proposed schemes that would reduce the written test requirements.

Who have I made fun of, Len? Show us the exact quotes.

Yes, subsidies. The projects could not pay for themselves, so they were subsidized. Without taxpayer money, the projects - and your jobs - would not have existed.

So what?

The money came from the taxpayers.

The projects could not pay for themselves in the free market, so they were subsidized. Without taxpayer money, the projects - and your jobs, and your paychecks - would not have existed.

IOW, you cannot provide anything to back up your claims. You just want to make all kinds of baseless assertions and never have to back them up.

IOW, you know I'm right and are trying to weasel out of backing up what you claim I said.

You're proving that you are "all talk no action" by doing so.

Seems to me that you are the one in fear of me, Len. You keep telling me to shut up in various ways, trying unsuccessfully to bring me down to your level, and getting all upset when I point out mistakes you made.

Now do try to work on your people skills - and your Morse Code skills....;-)

Instead you bring up the name of a representative who is from a

Such as Roosevelt's Social Security Administration? The next thing you know, your social security number is needed to open a bank account, to get a driver's license, or purchase a firearm. What does any of that Breaking in to an office building is very different than delivering mail or "monitoring" where phone calls are coming from and going to.

The democrats absolutely need "dirty" campaign ads to get elected.

How many children died from the school lunch program as the democrats claimed would die in their ads?

How is that? Should they get their Miranda Rights? Should they get the very best army of attorneys that a Saudi Prince can afford?

The democrats set-up the legal system so that we can't put the most law enforcement resources against the most likely suspects. So we have to waste billions having women drink suspicious fluids (breast milk) found in baby bottles when travelling with their infants, and monitoring
-all- phone calls and not just some.

What is needed is something called "profiling" which the dems have outlawed.

Dems have America's hands tied with the "racist profiling" conundrum.
Thanks.

Jim's an Extra. Like the "Patriot Act," he's able to monitor all posts, pull the key words out, if they aren't the key words he wants,
he closes it up and erases his mind...

Only George Soros's dollars have kept the lights on at Air America. The wackos from the far looney left have been unable to sell their lies and trash to the American public.
Air American announced total bankruptcy last week.
Maybe they could hire Dan Rather, Michael Moore, or Rosie O'Donnell to save them. The Democrat party is totally devoid of any ideas, save for their extremist leftist psycho-babble.

Wowza! Check out the Republican owned Rasmussen Reports poll that shows Bush's 3-point bounce since his September 11th tear-jerking has dissipated. He's back to 57% disapproval.

I just read the last of this tirade. Who the hell told you the Democratic party has no ideas? I suggest you watch C-Span and listen to a debate. Maybe go a few web sites of Democratic lawmakers and read what legislation they're proposing. Sorry but only the uninformed or untruthful actually believe that Democratic politicians don't have ideas and aren't introducing legislation. I have a challenge for you, name one issue the Democrats have no ideas for.

While most people can unscramble Decatur and Charleston and locate them, Illiopolis could be a problem if you are not familiar with small towns in Illinois. It's just west of Decatur. I'm not quite sure how far though as I never had occasion to go there. I once lived in Niantic, a small town between Decatur and Illiopolis.

Dee, N8UZE

I guess "most" people could unscramble them, yes, but then, "most" people spell correctly, thus making unscrambling unnecessary.
With Mark, who can't spell a two letter word correcectly, I have neither your pity or understanding.

Since they have no military service, they must have a surrogate that can be just as good.

There's no excuse for rebuilding a city there.

How much of a drain on the rest of the US taxpayers must New Orleans be?

Sheesh!!! That would explain at least a decade of his homosexual

But not financially bankrupt.

Funny thing I heard on NPR about a year ago. They were doing one of their many fundraisers, complaining that Air America was getting the donations that should be coming to them.

Hi!!! I got the biggest laugh out of that.

And dems say that Air NPR isn't biased... What a bunch of goofs.

Interesting. Liberals looks at drug abuse as a victimless crime, just people need some help, free needles, methadone, and billions in drug counseling and counseling centers.

All their rock and roll heroes and hollywood legends are stoned all of the time.

But when Rush avails himself to to these legal views that the liberals have put into place...

"he's a drugged-out loser."

Turn on your BFO. Pretend its "CW." Remember that "CW" gets through (noise) when nothing else will... :-)

Plain and simple fact: Jimmy is "too good" to associate with "riff-raff." He be royalty. Blue blood, etc. Blue in face.

>I'm not unglued at all, Len.

No crazy glue? Just crazy?

>Yes. You're shouting and name-calling and carrying on like an overtired

Here's a plain and simple fact: The FCC has no age limit on amateur radio licensees.

Ah, but now Jimmy DOESN'T LIKE two-year-olds!

Hello, a plain and simple fact of hypocrisy in action...:-)

Here's a plain and simple fact: Jimmy got his buttons pushed. Then he got his panties in a knot. Poor baby.

Here's a plain and simple fact: 'Denial' is not a river
in Egypt.

>Threat of violence.

You mean like "slashed tires," "bricks through windows," and implications of arriving at your house with "the boys?"

Here's a plain and simple fact: You take a simple word-play phrase and MANUFACTURE something unbelievable out of it!

>It doesn't fit me.

Here's a plain and simple fact: It is difficult to tailor invisible clothes for a perfect fit, emperor...

>Both NCVEC and NCI have proposed schemes that would reduce the written

Here's a plain and simple fact: The subject was NOT the NCVEC or NCI.

Here's another plain and simple fact: Jimmy constantly tries to misdirect into other subjects in order to avoid direct answers to challenging questions.

>The number of questions in the pool isn't the only issue.

Here's a plain and simple fact: This new sub-thread heading is about "guts and subsidies." Jimmy got little guts and no subsidies.

>> DROP it, Jimmy. I did, long ago.

into "error" mode, then says OTHER PERSON "brought it up."

Amazing.

Here's a plain and simple fact: Jimmy he OBVIOLSY gone off the deep end without floatation collar...

>> If you think that was 'better than you'
>> then you have an odd insecurity problem.
>You're the one claiming superiority.

No. "It ain't braggin' if ya done it..." :-)

Here's a plain and simple fact: When Jimmy's smug, arrogant "superiority" postings are challenged, he turns right around and blames his challengers!

Amazing.

>> >It was in a statement by an FCC official. You missed it - I didn't.
>
>> I check the Federal Register daily...the FCC website weekly.
>> When and by whom was this "statement" made?
>
>Look it up.

You don't KNOW? Tsk, tsk, tsk.

Here's a plain and simple fact: When Jimmy can't bring up some piece of data he says vague things like "look it up" to misdirect readers into thinking the OTHER party is "wrong."

Common tactic on newsgroups since ARPANET (well before Internet went public in 1991).

>I'm not yelling and I'm not on the sidelines. You are.

WRONG.

Here's a plain and simple fact: Amateur morsemen like Jimmy presume that AMATEUR radio is the ONLY radio activity. So, if one is not in THEIR narrow field of activity, they are on the "outside." :-)

>Actually, the FCC did agree with me on some things.

Yes, they "agreed" to accept a Comment or two in the ECFS. :-)

Here's a plain and simple fact: Jimmy likes to presume smug superiority so he drops VAGUE "hints' of "agreement" WITHOUT BEING SPECIFIC.

Here's a plain and simple fact: Jimmy likes to use the phrase "here's a plain and simple fact."

>Well, that's another Len mistake.

Here's a plain and simple fact: Jimmy did not READ what I wrote thoroughly, didn't realize he was caught by ENTRAPMENT. Poor baby. The net trap is binding him and didn't realize he got caught.

>> You are confused on the use of the word "subsidy."
>
>Nope.

Here's a plain and simple fact: 'Denial' is not a river
in Egypt.

>You used the word "we" as if you were the pope.

? You misspelled the word "poop." Tsk.

>> Are you ASHAMED of your job?
>Oh, no. I'm proud of it.

"Proud" of WHAT? Proud of NOTHING?

>> AFRAID someone will POKE FUN at it?
>Not at all.

But you refuse to talk about what you do.

Here's a plain and simple fact: Jimmy never describes what he does as an "electronics professional." He only drops VAGUE hints, then tries to take apart what others say about their jobs.

>When was that? Show your work.

See this posting. QED.

>Why should I respect you, considering the way you behave here?

Here's a plain and simple fact: Jimmy be smug, arrogant amateur morseman but imagines he is the noblest ham of all in looking down big nose at others.

>Yes, subsidies. The projects could not pay for themselves, so they were >subsidized. Without taxpayer money, the projects - and your jobs -
>would not have existed.

Here's another plain and simple fact: When Jimmy is pressed for a valid reply to a challenge, he MANUFACTURES new definitions for elementary socio-economic structures as above.

Here's a plain and simple fact: Without "taxpayer money" the USA would cease to exist as a nation.

Here's a plain and simple fact: Economics requires ALL areas of society/government to have to-from exchange of monies.

Here's a plain and simple fact: Jimmy NEVER say any detail of HIS subsidies, thinks he can get away with pointing fingers
at others, saying "shame, shame." :-)

>> >... If your employer was paid by the govt. for work you did, then >> > your paycheck came from the taxpayers.
>> INCORRECT AGAIN! [don't you ever learn]
>> My salary checks came from private businesses/corporations.
>
>So what?
>
>The money came from the taxpayers.

Prove that. Show your work. :-) That work of mine begins in 1948 according to the Social Security Administration and IRS, continues up to the end of 2005. [see also Illinois tax laws and California Franchise Tax Board after 1955...and ESPECIALLY the Department of Defense 1952 to 1956 inclusive]

WHY do you think that ONLY "taxpayers" "subsidized" my income, Jimmy? Haven't you been paying attention? Some of my income was NOT involved in DoD or NASA contracts, but rather on "the open market" (Jimmy call it "free market").
Can you state HOW MUCH was open-market and HOW MUCH was
(in your disturbed terms) "subsidized by taxpayers?"

>The projects could not pay for themselves in the free market, so they >were subsidized. Without taxpayer money, the projects - and your jobs, >and your paychecks - would not have existed.

So...Communications Technology Inc., BYTE Books, Micro-computing magazine, Scandinavian Airlines System, several radio and TV broadcast stations, post-production audio services in the entertainment industry, three companies making electronic test equipment sold on the "open market" plus two art studios, a photographic studio, and three private individuals whom I've been hired to do contract writing were ALL SUBSIDIZED BY THE [US] TAXPAYER ?!?

Go for it, Jimmy, show us the intimate connection between the US Treasury, IRS, at least two states' income taxes and ALL THOSE COMPANIES, CORPORATIONS, AND INDIVIDUALS PAYING ME from their "taxpayer subsidized" monies.

Here's a plain and simple fact: Jimmy is going into strange fantasy imaginings, desperately trying (but not succeeding) in reinforcing his wild premise of economics and "wrongness" of others.

>It's simple finances, Len.

Here's a plain and simple fact: Jimmy loves to play the smug, arrogant "know-it-all" yet makes wild leaps into areas where he doesn't know a damn thing.

>> But, you still don't have the GUTS to tell "the rest of us" >> in this newsgroup what, where of your employment, do you?
>
>It's not about "guts", Len.

"Gut" and "guts" are acceptible medical terms, believe it or not. Check with your MD (or veterinarian, whichever applies to you).

Here's a plain and simple fact: Jimmy loves to be smug and arrogant and never FINISHING his denigratory statements of others. He is an extra, therefore "exempt."

>> No, you want to negatively criticize those of us who are >> proud and enthusiastic about what we do, have done.
>
>It seems you cannot tolerate any criticism or dissent, Len. Even though >you criticize the work of others, no one must say boo about your work.

Here's a plain and simple fact: Jimmy looks into a mirror, sees himself, thinks OTHERS are causing that image.

Jimmy NEVER talks about what he does in any DETAIL for a living. He has presented some black-and-white digitized photographs of his 1974 ham radio project and implied it was used today, ignoring his earlier messaging about assembling an Elecraft KIT...all the while implying he
"DESIGNED and built his own radios." :-)

Amateur morsemen are constantly negatively criticizing my "work." Some are JEALOUS about a chance Army assignment in a big time HF communications station. Some are ENVIOUS of what I've done. Some are ANGRY because they feel FRUSTRATED in not being able to advance their own work
and try to relieve that frustration by their asshole
syndrome postings.

>Sure I have the guts to do so. I also have the common sense not to.

>It's not about courage, either.

Here's a plain and simple fact about those statements:
BULLSHIT.

Here's a plain and simple fact: You are AFRAID to reveal anything about your work.

>How can I make up what you actually wrote?

Here's a plain and simple fact: Jimmy will "set" some standard that is biased towards his preferences and say those are "right" and anyone else's contrary statements are "wrong."

>It's a simple request for you to back up your claims.

Here's a plain and simple fact: Jimmy states "claims are not backed up" even when his own claims aren't
"backed up" by anything other than old ARRL maxims.

>IOW, you cannot provide anything to back up your claims.

Here's a plain and simple fact: Jimmy couldn't "back up" his "claims" that the US taxpayer "subsidized" all my paychecks. [for good reason since I have all my tax receipts and he doesn't] Yet Jimmy insists and insists and insists and insists the HE is "always right"
and I am (almost) always "wrong."

>> Besides, OLD POSTS are in the past...they've already been >> argued over. You are NOT going to "win" any such OLD >> argument by repetition of the SAME posts from archives!
>> But...you keep on trying and trying and trying. You got >> very trying a long time ago.
>IOW, you know I'm right and are trying to weasel out of backing up what >you claim I said.

Here's a plain and simple fact: Jimmy wants to repeat OLD newsgroup arguments, apparently unsatisfied with the results of those OLD arguments, hoping to (maybe) "win"
one if re-argued often enough.

Here's another plain and simple fact: Jimmy keeps on doing that, making silly, idiotic claims about others who try to leave that in the past where it belongs:

>You're proving that you are "all talk no action" by doing so.

Here's a plain and simple fact: OLD newsgroup arguments ran their course and stopped.

Here's another plain and simple fact: Some sore-loser amateur morsemen just didn't get "satisfaction" and have to keep beating dead horses.

>Seems to me that you are the one in fear of me, Len.

Here's a plain and simple fact: Jimmy thinks once again
he is smug, superior, without error, but then attempts self-described "visions" (read imaginations) of himself as "tough" and "fearsome." <yawn>

>You keep telling >me to shut up in various ways, trying unsuccessfully to bring me down >to your level, and getting all upset when I point out mistakes you >made.

Tsk, tsk...I was trying to bring you UP to MY level! :-)

Here's a plain and simple fact: NO ONE can possibly tell an amateur morseman with delusions of superiority to "shut up!" :-)

Here, Jimmy, read my finger...

How much emergency comms have YOU done?

Why weren't the professionals better prepared, Len?

New Orleans AMATEURS were messed up more than the pros.

"NOLA?" One of your infatuations? What happened to Audrey?

New Orleans AMATEURS were messed up more than the pros.

>Why weren't the professionals prepared?

New Orleans AMATEURS were messed up more than the pros.

>Except that when Katrina hit, that didn't happen.

Tsk, tsk, it DID happen. NEW ORLEANS infrastructure was never COMPLETELY destroyed.

>And your point is?

You don't KNOW?!?

>You seem to be saying that since you were hundreds of miles form NOLA
>and Katrina didn't really affect you, that amateur radio performs no >service to the country.

Here's a plain and simple fact: Jimmy implies OTHER things about OTHER'S statements, connecting dots on different planes of existance in order to make some kind of point.

New Orleans AMATEURS were messed up more than the pros.

>So Amateur Radio does provide a service to the country.

Complete with uniforms, insignia, brass bands, and monuments to be erected whenever some smug, arrogant morsemen quit getting erections over their morsemanship.

>Glad to see you've finally admitted your mistakes, Len.

Here's a plain and simple fact: Whenever Jimmy gets caught up in ENTRAPMENT, he will NEVER ever admit he got caught and tries to weasel-word his reponses to show "others" are at "fault." :-)

>> The "service" aspect is largely confined to refills of the >> pipe that some smoke while dreaming in front of their radios.
>
>I don't smoke, Len.

Here's a plain and simple fact: Jimmy has NEVER had any bad habit. Indeed he has NEVER had or done or even thought about "bad" things.

>Why were the professionals so unprepared for Katrina, Len?

New Orleans AMATEURS were messed up more than the pros.

>And yet at least some of the search efforts were aided by amateur radio >communication. That's proven by first-had accounts by amateurs who were >there, doing the job.

Tell us all about, Mr. Tom Corbett, Space Cadet.

>Not all of them. Amateur Radio played a role.

You are not in the entertainment industry, stop all that role-playing about being a professional in acting.

>Some of those efforts used Amateur Radio communications.

That is because radio amateurs are NOT licensed to operate non-amateur radios.

>Try reading the account of the Shuttle debris search - from someone who >was there.

Here's a plain and simple fact: Jimmy can't understand that professionals in the space business know and can do their job better than wanna-be space cadets...or that mistakes DO happen but are FIXED by professionals in the space business.

Yet another plain and simple fact: Amateur morsemen are NOT divinely blessed with "rightness" more than no-code-test advocate mortals...despite their protestations that "all others are 'wrong.'"

Yet Jimmy has (perhaps is compelled by some self-righteousness)
the chutzpah to tell off anyone who has been IN the aerospace industry as a professional. Yes, he feels "more correct" because he has an amateur extra license gained largely through morsemanship...even though never stating he worked in it.

Now tell us where that fabled "morse code key" is located in any space shuttle...by station and deck and compartment. You know, the one that is supposed to be there for "emergencies" tucked away "just in case." I've been inside a shuttle being built, seen the plans, talked to a couple astronauts (John Young, Bob Crippen, the first pilots of STS), worked for the corporations that made the Space Shuttle Main Engines (SSME).
Give us all the straight info, scoop, without all that stuff about sounding like the "poop."

Then YOU go back to FR Doc. 06-6013 and REALLY READ it, without all that imagining of "greatness" and "nobility" about "serving the nation" by having a HOBBY. Put things into perspective without the Picasso cubism pictured by the League.
Think of the MILLIONS still displaced by Katrina into other parts of the USA. What is amateur radio doing to HELP them now?

Here's a finger, Jimmy. Enjoy.

That seems to have died down in favor of his mighty "rank" in the Civil Air Patrol (an opposite, a homonym, in re 'civil').

Interesting part, Jerry Oxendine's PR for the CAP aside, that Ace Robesin has NEVER told any DETAIL of HIS "flying adventures" in the CAP. Everything he's mentioned is in vague terms, catch phrases, all easily cribbed from Flying magazine or some CAP PR pamphlets. "His" CAP "defends the nation" by "flying SAR missions" as if he is the "pilot in command" (of, at best, a single-engine four-seater something). Sure as hell ain't no four-turbine Herky bird or a helo. All He-roic phrases, pumping up only his own Id with emotion.

That's been "Ace" Robesin's tactic all along in here, giving only vague details, cribbing PR catch phrases of some "service," then getting shot down by someone who REALLY was in that particular service. [Robesin didn't last long in the TN STATE Guard...wonder why not...the REAL reason?]

On "Major" Robesin, Last Action Hero, does he PAY for his own Avgas? OWN his own airplane to fly those "SAR missions?" Who does the A&P on his terrific aircraft? If we believe Jerry Oxendine's message, then Ace Major Robesin is throwing away a NURSE's salary right and left with very little going to his wife and daughter. QRZ bio says he lives in a "duplex." Around these parts that is a RENTAL. He's hit the 50 mark and never put any money into his own house for his family? What is Major Ace Robesin's task assignment in CAP? The REAL one? "Ordinance officer" that loads the missles on those single-engine Cessna hardpoints?

BWAAAAAAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAH!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Geez, Brian, this is getting to be FUN discussing the mighty major "ace." He has FAR outdone the "Dudley" character mentioned by novelist Ernest K. Gann many years ago!

Jimmy Noserve didn't say anything when an "ethical" extra amateur morseman thought he could "just pick up a phone, talk to authorities to have anyone of us picked up." Imagine that, a single "ethical" phone call. :-)

Jimmy "serves" his country by having amateur radio as a hobby.

Geez, that's as good as Nursie Stevie being a CAP Major, defending his country flying SAR missions!

frankly that sounds rather strange and vaguely sickening but after Steve instance on label other pedophiles one does have to that he listed his dead daughter (the 3rd) as the love of his life, not his current wife

Nah...Jimmy Noserve has (according to him) "practical courage" (rationalization for fear of stating details). Besides, amateur morsemen all stick together. THEY are the only ones in the "right" and all others are "wrong."

Now let's all be 'patriotic.' Learn morse code to DEFEAT TERRORISTS! :-)

As predicted by Len, he delivered his outrageous vituperation. Jim called him no names, didn't feel the need to go into the "CAPS" mode and was civil. Len is unable to match that behavior by responding in kind.
He is here only for civil debate on the morse code issue, heh.

Len Anderson is to amateur radio what a four iron is to a polo match.

Rush absolutely should have taken the same deal that the dems set up for themselves and their "drugged-out" loser children. Wonder why jobs go overseas? Few in America can pass a drug test.

frankly that sounds rather strange and vaguely sickening but after Steve instance on label other pedophiles one does have to that he listed his dead daughter (the 3rd) as the love of his life, not his current wife

Nah, they're ALL drugged out losers. Some have lost more than others. Rush is fortunate in that he got busted before he could do more damage to himself than just his hearing loss. Most of the rest are at least half brain dead.

why for noticing the preverted stuff that Robeson posts

"And on 16 May 1999, the love of my life, My Precious Taelor, died in

No. For not realizing just how twisted you yourself are. You are a web-footed, pathetic, scuttling creature right out of fiction, who can only think about how to hurt another with your words if you can.

I spit on you, little perverted Gollum-man. I despise you and wish for

"No. For not realizing just how twisted you yourself are. You are a web-footed, pathetic, scuttling creature right out of fiction, who can only think about how to hurt another with your words if you can." an annmouse RRAP today

amusing whnen Robeson types that I am a rapist it isn't hurtfull

when he types MY fathr is rapist that is ok too

when he type My wife is male that is also no problem

child molestor nothing hurtfull there any extra can say these thigngs about ME but if I daere QUOTE a parcular statement of an extra I " ..am only thinking about how to hurt someone"

wwell that just isn't so

Id rather not have to remind Robeson that 2 (or more) can play that game. Id prefer civl discourse but that is impossible with someone that has been calling you a childmolestor for some time now

if Robeson would like to avoid uch reminders he knows what to do
ill remind him later

failing that yes the ONLY other vaible tactic to make be hurtfull enough in turn to try to persaude tohim to see the error of his ways

all he has to do is STOP lying

stoping claiming my wife is male

stop calling me a child molestor

stop acussing me of welfare fraud

stop using libelous accusations against others to harrass them

apologize for calling my DAD a rapist

apologize for lying about the non existance of the 47th my old unit apologize for lying about the non existance of the 214 fa of which it was part

NB: Ernest K. Gann's autobiographical "Fate is the Hunter" about airline pilots and flying. Gann passed on a few years ago in Washington state after many years as a pilot (a REAL "pilot in command" unlike Major Ace).

Perhaps the whole TN CAP wing ought to do a massive SAR for Major Ace's heart and brain...both conspicuously missing for years.

We knew you were a sociopath, Markie, but this is a new low even for you. You obviously never had children (thank God!) or you would not make such a stupid remark. But when have you ever made an intelligent remark, you stalking little pipsqueak troll?

And you wonder why people on here hate your guts? You are indeed beyond help.

2921. of Course I kno w what Robeson was syaing in his Bio, but I do play his wod games back at hi from time tot time

And on 16 May 1999, the love of my life, My Precious Taelor, died in her sleep. Taelor was my third daughter and was born with severe birth defects and expected to not live past age two. I kept her for five years, eleven months, three weeks and one day. " from K4yz Bio on QRZ

frankly that sounds rather strange and vaguely sickening but after Steve instance on label other pedophiles one does have to that he listed his dead daughter (the 3rd) as the love of his life, not his current wife

and stve will go and and about it butI took his statement and simply aplied the sort of twist he does then we watch him dance

he can't laugh it off after he clais NOBODY reads my stuff so if he were teling the truth no harm done

"No. For not realizing just how twisted you yourself are. You are a web-footed, pathetic, scuttling creature right out of fiction, who can only think about how to hurt another with your words if you can." an annmouse RRAP today

amusing whnen Robeson types that I am a rapist it isn't hurtfull

when he types MY fathr is rapist that is ok too

when he type My wife is male that is also no problem

child molestor nothing hurtfull there any extra can say these thigngs about ME but if I daere QUOTE a parcular statement of an extra I " ..am only thinking about how to hurt someone"

wwell that just isn't so

Id rather not have to remind Robeson that 2 (or more) can play that game. Id prefer civl discourse but that is impossible with someone that has been calling you a childmolestor for some time now

if Robeson would like to avoid uch reminders he knows what to do
ill remind him later

failing that yes the ONLY other vaible tactic to make be hurtfull enough in turn to try to persaude tohim to see the error of his ways

all he has to do is STOP lying

stoping claiming my wife is male

stop calling me a child molestor

stop acussing me of welfare fraud

stop using libelous accusations against others to harrass them

apologize for calling my DAD a rapist

apologize for lying about the non existance of the 47th my old unit

apologize for lying about the non existance of the 214 fa of which it

Hmmm. A radio personality who railed against drugged out hippies and "tree huggers" is caught in the act of illegally obtaining drugs for his own use. Purchasing drugs in a parking lot with shoe boxes full of cash for his local pusher.

Who is hypocritical? Linearity is a curious concept when applying it to this obese fraud.

Al Franken had it right: "Rush Limbaugh is a Big Fat Idiot".

If YOU'RE offended that's YOUR problem.

In American English, "gas" is short for gasoline. Gasoline is the same as petrol. The term petrol is generally not used here.

day at most.

Despite the fact that you want such a limit.

Actually, I like them just fine. Real two-year-olds, that is, not adults behaving like two-year-olds.

> Hello, a plain and simple fact of hypocrisy in action...:-)

There's a person in Sun Valley, CA who wants the real estate zoning in "his" neighborhood to be unchanged. He thinks the fact that he owns property there - has an investment there, really - gives him rights which supersede those of others might want to buy property there, or build there. Doesn't matter what real estate experience the Outsiders have, he thinks they should have no voice in changing the zoning in "his" neighborhood. The Government should use The Law to enforce his wishes against Outsiders.

But at the same time, he wants to change the rules for Amateur Radio, in which he has no investment and no participation. He thinks the fact that he has some experience outside Amateur Radio makes him more qualified to judge the rules for Amateur Radio than those who really are amateur radio operators. He does not intend to become an amateur radio operator, he just wants to stay on the outside and change the rules, so The Government will use The Law to enforce his wishes.

You mean that kind of action?

It was about the proposed reduction of written testing by no-code-test advocates. Both NCI and NCVEC - who are no-code-test advocates - have also proposed license schemes with reductions in written testing.

No but there IS federal law that do protect ISP from "liability" including the CDA which states an ISP can not be held liable what their user post or send. I really suggest you read other laws beside the court case of Miller V Californmia. Try Verizon Vs RIAA (in Verzion v RIAA, the US Court of Appeal stated that an ISP is not responsible for what their users transmit and was not liable for copyright infringment.
citing CDA and the DMCA safe habour provision.

The problem is however, In Illinois according to my lawyer, a ISP is consider a public Utlility and is such regulated by the state. Like I said before when you suggested that I start my own ISP, the reason is the city limits how many ISP are allowed the town (just like do with cable) and you have to obtain a permit which cost thousands and thousands of dollars. Internet here is regulated by both the city and the state.

Yes, that's true, as far as it goes. But that is a "blanket" protection in the sense that the ISP is not expected to monitor everything that comes through its data stream because that wouldn't be possible due to the sheer volume of data. However, when something specific is brought to an ISPs attention the blanket protection is compromised. When notified of a possible TOS violation the ISP has a duty to check it out and act if action is warranted. Failure to act on a specific allegation could expose the ISP to liability for failure to exercise due diligence.

That's interesting. I did know that some jurisdictions were beginning to consider ISPs as public utilities subject to state and local regulation but I wasn't aware that Illinois was one of them. Sounds to me like typical politics - make something illegal unless you obtain a permit, then charge up the arse for the permits. And I would bet that most of the permits go to large companies who have the financial wherewithal to bribe the politicians who grant the licenses. Damn politicians get you coming and going.

That does open a very interesting can of worms, though. Since ISPs in Illinois are considered public utilities, I would think that it would be extremely difficult to TOS someone. After all, the electric company is a public utility and they can't arbitrarily terminate your service just because they don't like you; about the only thing they can terminate service for is nonpayment of the bill.

Relax. He has Bill Clinton's Iraq war to gloat over, lucky fella. You don't think Clinton has enough on his mind with his levee failures in New Orleans last year or with his Kadima bud in Israel wasting Lebanon again? See what happens when you wait until the last few months in office to try to negotiate a Middle East peace? You get a can-do guy like George Bush who really knows how to shake things up and get some ackshun. (Watch out we don't bring dummockrissy to your part of the world!) No sir. George Bush is a man who doesn't waste his time reading newspapers every day.

And it's a good thing al-Qaeda didn't try to take over Bill Clinton's El Salvador the way they took over Afghanistan. Otherwise, George Bush, the most competent president since Herbert Hoover, would have to order the invasion of Mexico with Bill Clinton's military and land on the Abraham Lincoln on 5 de mayo with banners proclaming "MISSION ACCOMPLISHED."
That Bush!

Buncha sore loser Democrats sniffle that Bush gets all the credit for straightening out Bill Clinton's mess. Well he deserves all the credit and on November 7, you can vote to strengthen his hand.

(Ohmigod. George Bush is down another point in the Rasmussen Reports poll, and that's the Republican version! He needs your help. Make sure he gets it on November 7.)

I have to explain that post? Bush isn't just a bad either.) Bush's cockamamie administration comes

But your station is not an authorized station. It is an intentional radiator, and it must accept all interference it experiences.

I'm glad to see you calling the FCC's attention to your illegal Part 15 operation and even giving them the exact frequency on which their monitoring stations should listen.

You're just like the talking bird who gets out of its owner's house and sits in the yard yelling "Here kitty, kitty, kitty!"

Yes. You blamed the New Orleans levee failures on Bill Clinton, yet these failures happened 5 years into Bush's administration and after a severe cutback in federal infrastructure funding. I normally don't respond to your posts because it appears you come from another planet. But I wasn't going to let this one slip by.

Irelavant No staion is required to accept intentional interference from another station after any other staion operating nearby is also unauthorized

Omega one must accept interfernce from say an electric utility but not from who avowed prupose to the jam Omega one. OTOH Omega is screwed if c oercail happened to have minor sput tnear it as long as that spur was small enough and the rules of the comercail broadcast station

the FCC is quite clear NO one is legaly to accept intetnional interfence proving can be problematic

Could it possibly be the cronies Shrub put in charge of FEMA? You have to wonder how many other posts are filled with the likes of Heckuvajob Brownie.

This E coli fiasco is a prime example of government that doesn't work. However, that is the goal of Republicans. They say government doesn't work, so they do their best not to make it work. It is a self fulfilling prophecy.

It would be possible to respond to this IF the post was intelligent, well-constructed, and spelled correctly so the meaning of same was clear (and accurate). But since it is made up of incoherent, mispelled and mis-informed diatribe of ignorance, half-truths and misinformation, it is not possible to engage in meaningful discussion. Your post is completely misinformed, lacks research that would accurately present what CAP IS, does, and its current relationship to the military. Go to the web and READ before posting ignorance.

Like I said before (I am done with this crap) because it is impossible to argue with stupidity. The post, its lack of intelligence, and its silly syntax, speaks LOUDLY of the content and gray matter of the poster! :(

Now he's responsible for bacteria. Damn! I don't like the guy much, but that's evil or something. Shut up and let the research scientists conclude what happened, and early clues point to poor, pssibly criminal farming practices and maybe waste water comtamination. Still they

?? I didn't manufacture any definitions.

The government-funded projects you worked on could not pay for themselves, so they were paid for with taxpayer money. IOW, a government subsidy.

>Without "taxpayer money" the USA would cease to exist as a nation.

That's self-evident, Len. Why do you bother to mention it?

> Economics requires ALL areas
> of society/government to have to-from exchange of monies.

"All areas"? Probably not. However, that's irrelevant.

The fact is that government-funded projects are actually taxpayer-funded. If someone works on such a project, they are being subsidized - paid - by the taxpayers.

Unlike free-market businesses, government projects do not have to meet the same economic criteria as private industry. For example, NASA cannot operate like a private industry, because the capital costs are too high and the short-term Return On Investment is too low. So the taxpayers fund NASA.

>Jimmy NEVER say any detail
>of HIS subsidies, thinks he can get away with pointing fingers
>at others, saying "shame, shame." :-)

Where have I said subsidies are a bad thing, Len?

You're projecting your own feelings again. You don't like subsidies, even though you've been on the receiving end of them, so you react to the word negatively.

>>> >... If your employer was paid by the govt. for work you did, then >>> > your paycheck came from the taxpayers.

>>> INCORRECT AGAIN!

No, it's correct. "Your paycheck" means "the money you were paid". If your employer was paid by the govt. for work you did, then your paycheck - the money - came from the taxpayers.

Are you ashamed of that?

>>> My salary checks came from private businesses/corporations.

>>So what? The money came from the taxpayers.

It's self-evident, Len. By definition, government-funded projects are paid for by the taxpayers.

That's nice, Len.

So what? Nobody said that all your work was taxpayer-funded (i.e., subsidized). Just the part that was government work.

In your anger and haste, you've misunderstood what I wrote.

>Can you state HOW MUCH was open-market and HOW MUCH was
>(in your disturbed terms) "subsidized by taxpayers?"

Don't you know, Len?

>>The projects could not pay for themselves in the free market, so they

Were they doing government projects?

btw, you sure seem to have gone through a lot of employers.

No, such images are caused by optical reflection. Basic optics, Len.

>Jimmy NEVER talks about what he does in any DETAIL for a >living.

Len, why should anyone who disagrees with you tell you anything about themselves, their work, their families, etc.? Telling you such things always has a negative ROI.

I've seen how you have criticized the work of health care professionals, professional radio and communications people (including both military and government-service radio operators), mechanical engineers, electrical engineers, etc. - if they dare to disagree with you about the Morse Code test for an amateur radio license. Given that behavior, why should I tell you anything about myself?

>He has presented some black-and-white digitized

You mean the receiver? That was just one of my 1974 projects. It was a really good receiver, built for almost no money. I've built a lot more since then.

>and implied it was used today,

Where? You have made another mistake, Len.

>ignoring his earlier messaging about >assembling an Elecraft KIT...

Len, you're really on a roll with the mistakes this time....

>all the while implying he
>"DESIGNED and built his own radios." :-)

Where did I say that, Len? You're just adding to the mistake pile.

>"work."

Can't you 'take the heat' of newsgroup give-and-take, Len? It seems you want to give but never take - criticize but never be criticized - behave one way but demand that others behave differently. (Then when they do behave differently from you, you criticize that)

>Some are JEALOUS about a chance Army assignment >in a big time HF communications station.

Well, that leaves me out. I'm not jealous of you, Len.

>Some are ENVIOUS of what I've done.

Well, that leaves me out. I'm not envious of you, Len.

>Some are ANGRY because they feel >FRUSTRATED in not being able to advance their own work
>and try to relieve that frustration by their asshole
>syndrome postings.

Well, that leaves me out. I'm not angry or frustrated about not being able to advance my own work, Len. I'm not even angry at you. I almost feel sorry for you, sometimes, because you waste so much energy on spouting your anger here.

And your postings speak for themselves. What they say isn't very nice.

>>Sure I have the guts to do so. I also have the common sense not to.
>>It's not about courage, either.

>BULLSHIT.

Well, you're the authority on that subject, Len ;-)

>You are AFRAID to reveal anything about your work.

Nope. I'm not afraid at all. The ROI of telling you personal information is all negative. Why should anyone do that?

>>How can I make up what you actually wrote?

>>It's a simple request for you to back up your claims.

> Jimmy states "claims

>"backed up" by anything other than old ARRL maxims.

In the cases I cited, you have claimed that I wrote certain things here on rrap. But you can not or will not show where I wrote what you claim
I did. So why should anyone believe what you claim I said, when it would be a simple matter for you to post links to the alleged quotes?

You get really mad when someone brings up things you wrote in the past, and then verifies them with links and actual quotes. Like your classic "sphincters" posting - that was a real doozy.

>>IOW, you cannot provide anything to back up your claims.

>Jimmy couldn't "back >up" his "claims" that the US taxpayer "subsidized" all >my paychecks. [for good reason since I have all my >tax receipts and he doesn't]

I didn't say all your paychecks were taxpayer subsidized, Len. You've made yet another mistake.

How so? Farms take the cheap way out by providing only the barest of essentials to their farmworkers. Many farms do not even have conveniently located outhouses and places to wash the hands. It's likely that the e coli outbreak came from a farmworker who didn't wash his hands after defecating. The other likely cause is using human or animal waste as fertilizer, though it's unlikely because this is frowned upon by agricultural inspectors.

Interesting that the company that grew the spinach is called "Natural Selection Farms". Sounds like natural selection at play, definitely.

It would have been nice if the news media would have focused in on this situation by finding out a little about farming. I watched some videos of stories from KRON, KPIX, and CNN, and didn't see anything talking about the source of the problem.

Also, our local news media (this is a local or somewhat local story, having taken place in the Salinas Valley), hasn't told people that all they need to do is cook the spinach! Cook the spinach at at least 150 degrees (160 to be safe) for 5 minutes, and that's all there is to it. Or if people are still squeamish about it, bring the water to a boil for a few minutes (212 degrees).

Why couldn't the local media cover this? It's not rocket science. Hell, the local news media are better at covering rocket science...

I know why you're upset Mark, Your life is a complete failure, you're stupid, you're not a real ham, and then just four days ago, you found out Woger was seeing another man and you thought your gay affection would be enough to satisfy him. so now you're devastated, & confused, and thinking everyone on the internet is me.

Maybe request Todd play an old love song on Omega One that you and Roger used enjoy when you were in love. "Just an old-fashioned Gay love song"

I think Lloyd might make a pass at you now that Roger's out of the way. Do you like pizza?

No Markie, You love Roger and he loves you. The only times you and Roger ever gag is when you deep throat each other. Now take your love fight to a

Up 'til now I have not read your posts- just subject lines.
From them, I gather you are something of a ham radio guru. May I ask a few qualifying questions?

1. Do you have a code proficinecy certificate - if so at what speed? If not, how fast can you copy? I would hope at least in excess of 20WPM, given your posts.

2. Do you build/design most or any of your equipment?

3. Have you published in any of the amateur journals?

4. Are you active in perhaps EME or microwave or other modes that require at least a modicum of technical expertise?

I will admit that I, and the amateurs I congregate with can answer yes many times over to the above ( oh yeah, proficiency at 25WPM)
but you don't find any of us ranting about the current state of exams.
Those that wish to use code may, and those that enjoy designing/building may. Those that don't may want to in the future with proper Elmering.

Looking forward to your response,

Dale W4OP

The original clip can be downloaded from a number of sites. It's very good.

btw, the Morse ops were going less than 30 wpm - far below the world record - yet they easily defeated the world record text-messagers.

Either your ISP's usenet server is losing them, (sometimes they drop groups intentionally), or something else is goofy with the usenet handling of this group. I just went to check that group and it came up with no new postings. However, I then reloaded all articles and it showed a several postings made yesterday and today. So, bottom line, it IS still working.

since you don't know the facts of the matter you can't accurately make any such stament

the FACTS are that CAP has agreed through it office of IG that is obeson remarks were made to another meber of CAP even in the maner they were made they would be actionable (so say the IG CAP)

Fact Cap calims it renders due coutesy to the ARMed forces therefore it should apply the same standards of cuondcut esp as an ARMY officer would be subject to displine (posible stacakde time) if he acted toward a meber of CAP as Major Robeson has toward myself since Cap refuses to address Major Robeson's behavoir it does not render military coutesy to the armed which it claims to do in the CAP press realease that serves as the FIRST post in this thread

the Question remains unanswered Why does CAP insist on claiming it does something it doesn't do?

I have to plop this one in there....

I have been reading your stupid shit for over 3 years and I cannot take it anymore!

He is right, you truly are an idiot, Mark. A liar about your military history (which is a federal offense) and a liar about every thing else you do. You are a moron, a waste of human skin and you are an oxygen thief.

Go get a life and get the hell off of these threads. You spread like an infection.

You can't put together a sentence. You can't spell and the world knows that you are a retard. You ruin every thread all over the internet, with you stupid and off topic remarks, which are litterally insane in nature.

To keep this short, so you can understand it Mark. Your a fu&#%#$ fag who is nothing but a CB'er at best. You are a discrace to everything that you do (which is not much). You suck ass and nobody wants to listen to or read you stupid ass, jerk off remarks. You never reply to anything with any real reponse to there post. Nothing you say makes any sense at all. Not even a little bit. Everyone struggles to understand what in the hell you ARE trying to say.

Nobody wants to listen to you at all. In fact, I would be happy to think that most people would enjoy NOT ever hearing from you again. You have a post in every single god damn forun on here. GET A FU&^$%& LIFE! Go cut down trees, sell your stupid wood and waste your money on some other hobby. Maybe you could take up suicide as a past time!

God bless you and the idiots you hang around with.

Good luck Dale.

His type has a single point of aim, and a single point of failure. He probably has no idea how to make a power divider for 432 or a sequencer for an EME station. Hell, probably has no idea what either one is.

Some people have a single point of view on what it takes to be a capable amateur radio operator. And they could do it with a spark gap transmitter. And couldn't use much of anything more advanced.

BTW, you might be interested to know that VE4MA worked a couple of the NLRS (Minneapolis) group on 10 Gigs Saturday night on rain scatter. 620 kilometers on about 8 watts CW. Maybe good enough for NBFM, but no one bothered.

Anyone who relies on hams and ham radio as being a money making deal in anything is a flipping fool who's wheels are completely off-the-rails.

Well.....perhaps not everything. I hear at some VEC in SoCal and some parts of Fla you can make quite alot of "scratch" selling Advanced and Extra class tickets - esp to boaters - hint-hint-hint.
The only other money maker is a certain seller of ham radio gear on e-bay.
(you know who of they are)

BULLSHIT! Code is NOT KNOWLEDGE!!! I have NO problem learning technical info that helps me use the radio properly. Code is not needed to do that.

Get off your high-horse already.

>Make them stay on CB and FRS. They're not an asset to the service.

CB and FRS don't have the range.

>And neither are you.

Who the FUCK are YOU to make such a statement? You snot nosed, arrogant PRICK! You do NOT know the kind of person that I am!! Wake up and smell the cappuccino! Code is obsolete! Knowing code does NOTHING to make somebody an "asset to the service". And, could you explain what makes a person an "asset to the service"?

What fantasy do you hold that you would believe that your tiny-fisted tantrums would have more weight than that of a leprous desert rat, spinning rabidly in a circle, waiting for the bite of the snake?

Code testing should NOT be thrown away. It is the one thing that keeps SOME of the lazy bastards off of HF. At least off HF legally! I hated to see the 13 and 20 WPM requirements lifted. I took the 20 WPM right off the bat. 5 is easy... there are 6 and 7 year olds, and 60 and 70 year olds who pass that. 13 isn't hard either. 20 just takes some practice. I went from no license, to extra in 1 year... when I was 15 years old. I went from knowing no code at all, to 20 WPM in 3 weeks of 2 hours per day listening to code tapes and copying the ARRL bulletins.

Code is a tradition. And don't try and compare code to slavery or something completely ignorant like that. They are apples and oranges.

Now, im sure you will all want to attack me for what I have said. So, go ahead. It doesn't matter to me. I have my extra. So, I really don't care either way. Quite honestly, I don't even operate anymore. The mentality of the people on HF has dropped so badly, I hardly ever operate except to speak to a family member once a week that is in Canada. And I talk on 440 simplex to a couple people here locally.

Reading this newsgroup reminds me of why I don't get on HF anymore. 75 meters and this newsgroup and many things in common.

Perhaps. But look at the number of folks who walk out of a public restroom without washing their hands... and the water and soap are right there!

That would imply guilt...

And saying that spinach comes from farms is called "profiling."

Buy canned spinach

Because rocket science problems can always be blamed on government. Spinach problems have to be blamed on farmers, farm workers, or food workers, though some will make it a government problem. Government is always bad...

Spinach growers were told to improve safety
Current E. coli outbreak not the first linked to California growers
By ANDREW BRIDGES
The Associated Press
WASHINGTON - Federal health officials told California farmers to improve produce safety in a pointed warning letter last November - nearly a year before the multistate E. coli outbreak linked to spinach.

In fact, the current food-poisoning episode is the 20th since 1995 linked to spinach or lettuce, the Food and Drug Administration says.

Though state and federal officials have traced the current outbreak to a California company's fresh spinach, they haven't pinpointed the source of the bacteria that have killed one person and sickened more than 100 others.

The FDA is still warning consumers not to eat fresh spinach.

There is no evidence of tampering in the outbreak, FDA spokeswoman Susan Bro said Monday. That leaves a broad range of other possible sources, including contaminated irrigation water that's been a problem in California's Salinas Valley. The area on California's central coast produces much of the U.S. spinach crop.

There have been 19 other food-poisoning outbreaks since 1995 linked to lettuce and spinach, according to the FDA. At least eight were traced to produce grown in the Salinas Valley. The outbreaks involved more than 400 cases of sickness and two deaths.

In 2004 and again in 2005, the FDA's top food safety official warned California farmers they needed to do more to increase the safety of the fresh leafy greens they grow.

"In light of continuing outbreaks, it is clear that more needs to be done," the FDA's Robert Brackett wrote in a Nov. 4, 2005, letter.

Suggested actions included discarding any produce that comes into contact with floodwaters. Rivers and creeks in the Salinas watershed are known to be periodically contaminated with E. coli, Brackett said.

Meanwhile, the FBI is monitoring the situation, said spokesman Rich Kolko. He called it a routine and precautionary measure, not an indication of suspicious activity.

The FDA's Bro dismissed a claim by Natural Selection Foods, the company linked to the outbreak, that its organic spinach products had been cleared of suspicion.

"The FDA has not cleared any products from the list and continues to recommend consumers avoid eating fresh spinach products," she said.

Natural Selection has recalled 34 brands of fresh spinach products, distributed throughout the United States as well as to Canada and Mexico. The company said the manufacturing codes turned over to health officials from packages of spinach that had infected patients all were from non-organic spinach. The company packages both organic and conventionally grown spinach in separate areas at its San Juan Bautista, Calif. plant.

The FDA and California Department of Health Services were reviewing irrigation methods, harvest conditions and other practices at farms possibly involved.

The spinach could have been contaminated in the field or during processing. About 74 percent of the fresh-market spinach grown in he U.S. comes from California, according to the California Farm Bureau Federation.

E. coli cases linked to the tainted spinach have been reported in 20 states, with Wisconsin reporting the most cases, including the death of a 77-year-old woman.

The Illinois Department of Public Health said Monday an elderly woman hospitalized with kidney failure is the state's first confirmed case in the spinach-linked outbreak. Other states reporting cases were California, Connecticut, Idaho, Indiana, Kentucky, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, New Mexico, Nevada, New York, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Utah, Virginia, Washington and Wyoming, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Government is NOT always bad. They saved your ass just as they've done millions of times in all the years of your misinformed life, and you should give them some credit.

Waxing poetic now?

Yes it's obsolete. Yes, it's fun.

Should it be used to qualify? Let the FCC decide (soon).

If it is eliminated, will that change the "Service"? Maybe.

Will CW disappear? Probably not.
Historically, it defined ham radio, so it has a special place in the hearts of very many hams. It's natural that they sort of cling to it.

Will CW's elimination be the end of ham radio? Of course not.
Ham radio will cease when all the hams die off. New hams are needed, with or without code.

My personal hope is that a significant minority of these new hams will take up CW and learn to enjoy this mode. It truly is a fun mode. I hope people will WANT to learn it.

Compulsory things are seldom welcome,,,some are necessary. Is CW a good requirement for ham radio? I guess it has probably outlived its day.

A requirement related to other digital modes would make a good replacement. True?

Previously: AB8QM <----
Timothy R Cookson

When Tim realized how close his call was to AB8MQ, he had it changed immediately, out of fear of having his reputation contaminated. Now we can see that he was very wise to do so.

In message <acg2jt$b6q$3@pita.alt.net>, AB8MQ issues a West Virginia hillbilly insult when he says: "Faggot Lee is gnetically [sic] related to his sister."

Heh. The previous poster has the same predilection for going tut-tut that caused me to add poor Higdon to the kill-file, although as far as I know, Higdon doesn't imply that he comes from a different planet. Higdon's thing is, "I do it too." But it's the censuriousness that becomes intolerable, and not the fact that he's a copy cat or comes from Neptune. Common equity demands I add Mr. Kaye.
So, <kerplonkity>. Watch out, Wattenburg. You're next.

I bet I have to explain this, too. I, like most pinko leftist West Coast tax-and-spend liberals, regard Herbert Hoover as one of the worst presidents, exeeded in incompetence by his predecessor Calvin Coolidge who was exceeded only by his predecessor, Warren G. Harding.

And two of them have Bay Area connections.
Hoover was from Palo Alto. Harding died in San Francisco, supposedly in the same room as an earlier king of Tonga. (*)

So, it's relevant to the "ba" in ba.broadcast.
But how is it relevant to "broadcast"?
Well, now you'll understand a snide reference that someone in the media makes. Probably someone on NPR or Bernie Ward.

(*) I tried to find a reference to the king on the Web, but it turns out to come from my own Web site. I got it from a staffer at the Sheraton Palace in SF.

indeed the floks like Wisemen and Slow code Heil and Robeson inheritied the ARS from people of some vision and and have slowly had it pried out of their hands.

they have failed to adapt and change with the time and thus lostthe the place of the ARS in techinical inovation (wether that can be regained I don't know) the have lost control of the ARS now. sadly the Nocoders have not manged to fully grab control either

That is Woger's photo, and at first he even admitted it. After that, he changed his story and made the claim that several different people posted that photo on Yahoo. It's a lot like Woger's claims about the visit that Dave Heil made to his house. The story kept on changing as time went by.

Nobody (and I mean NOBODY) believes your story. That's why you can still go to the Cocksucker's Lounge at NIM Busters and see a little, animated character peeing on your photo. It's at

I never understand why people feel compelled to announce their kill-file entries. Who cares? Just enter the person and shut the fuck up about it. Myself, I never use them. If I don't want to read particular people for, I have more than enough will power not to read them.

Herbert Hoover
Born in an Iowa village in 1874, he grew up in Oregon.

I am about as liberal as you can get without going to jail, but I must disagree with your assessment of HH. He was a decent, honest man who had accomplished great things before he became president. He was blindsided by the depression, as was everyone else. FDR (Who is the 2nd greatest president, after George Washington.) was also at a loss, but was willing to try anything hoping something would work. Harry Truman (another great president) rehabilitated HH by calling him back to government service and by renaming Boulder Dam after him. I agree with your characterization of HH's predecessors, but suggest you take another look at HH, he was a great man. (He also organized the first Cal - Stanford football game.)

Think Back, Are todays conversations on 2 meters as technical as they were 25 years ago, or today might you hear things like:

"I woke up this morning with a pimple on my butt" or

"The dog crapped on the living room carpet again."

Allowing no-codes on VHF & UHF has made discussions less technical and more like CB. Don't let your hatred of CW destroy our HF bands too.

I remember when RRAP was respectable, then Mark morgan came back and Woger found someone he could pick on with ease, like taking candy from a baby. It doesn't help for Mark to admit he doesn't have anything against homos, and Woger teases him about it. I have to admit I've got caught up in it too when the only reason I came back was to try to make the group respectable again and try to get usenetter hams to support keeping the code requirement. But with Mark here now and not enough good folk left in the group, I'll probably just bow out, and the stupid and lazy can take over ham radio.

It's written tests and CW that keep the sick, lame, and lazy, out of your receiver, not a plonk button or kill-filter. Don't degrade receiver performance. Support keeping CW, and increasing the speed requirement, and make the passing score for writtens 85%.

It is common among REAL radio-electronics professionals to talk about what they do to other pros. Some call that "shop talk." Lots and lots of such "shop talk" goes on at electronics trade shows, in the various publications of the IEEE.

Oh, yes, I forgot that you do NOT belong to the IEEE, a professional organization. I do. 397 thousand OTHERS belong to the IEEE all around the world. Of course, you are "too good" to belong to a professional organization, aren't you. They are beneath you?

You are an amateur extra and SO much better than the pros in radio.

Tsk...I'll have to contact the Department of Agriculture to get "my subsidy money" that is "owed" me. :-)

>The fact is that government-funded projects are actually

Whaaa, whaaa, whaaa cries Jimmy, wanting that dead horse to come alive so he can beat it to death again...! :-)

Ever been to Kern County Airport #7, Jimmy? That's the location of a private company called "Scaled Composities."
They've already been to outer space and back...twice.

NASA paid Scaled Composites? Well, did they? No, you say?

Kern County Airport #7 is actually quite a big airport, an old USMC aircraft training location during WW2 and now home to many corporations, including several civilian flight test companies and at least one large used-aircraft reseller. The latter looks like a civilian version of Davis-Monthan AFB.

Heh heh heh...some of it came from ME! By your weird-ass logic I was self-employed!!!

BWAAAAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHA!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

>Are you ashamed of that?

Not at all. Except for laws of the US on espionage and classified information, whatever private business restrictions signed-for, I can talk about all sorts of work I've done. Heck and darn, lil Jimmy, some of that has been written up in public periodicals! :-)

You are ashamed to state what you work on except for the most vague way...such as being in the "transport industry."

>It's self-evident, Len.

We know you are "self-evident," Jimmy. <yawn>

Bus drivers are in the "transport industry." Larry Roll, the soma-cum-loud "graduate" in "Human Resources" (personnel department work) was a bus driver!

Are you a bus driver, Jimmy?

>By definition, government-funded projects are >paid for by the taxpayers.

"By definition?!?" Whose "definition?"

My Webster's New World Compact School and Office Dictionary, 1989, says simply "...a grant of money, as from the government to a private organization."

Doesn't mention "taxpayers" at all. I have yet to get a grant from the government. [I'd like to, sort of like "free money" in my viewpoint] I have yet to get a grant from any organization.

I can see that someone who does so much nothing that they can't describe what they do would be sorely pissed that others get/got comfortable salaries for working on government contracts. Yes, we feel your pain, Jimmy.

>So what? Nobody said that all your work was taxpayer-funded (i.e., >subsidized). Just the part that was government work.

"Nobody" else dwells on this "subsidy" bullshit, Jimmy.

Only you.

What happened, did the Dept. of Agriculture turn down your offer to NOT plant certain crops so you could get a real subsidy?

>btw, you sure seem to have gone through a lot of employers.

You betcha. Lots and lots of employers were here in southern California aerospace, Jimmy.

Too bad you weren't part of it. You sat there on the sidelines in "EPA" (Eastern Pennsylvania) (bad acronym since you aren't involved with Environmental Protection Agency).

I've lived in southern California for 50 years, Jimmy.

There, a NEW thing you can make all sorts of implications about...have a ball!

>Check with your dictionary ;-)

I already did. Your weird-ass "definition" of subsidy doesn't fit Webster's.

>I've seen how you have criticized the work of health care >professionals, professional radio and communications people (including >both military and government-service radio operators), mechanical

Interestingly, all those you mention were PRO-code-test advocates! Did their work MANDATE keeping the code test in US amateur radio? I don't think so.

Oh, and that "health care professional" you mentioned has yet to identify his place of work, has yet to provide any sort of identification of his "military career," nor the true circumstances why he left (suddenly) the Tennessee State Guard. Yet that individual have written obscene personal insults to just about everyone in this newsgroup (all remain in Google archives). He doesn't seem to know what a "Sharps" is, doesn't understand what 'helicobacter pylori' is, doesn't seem to know shit from shinola.

Try for a better 'hero' to worship, Jimmy.

I will, have, and expect to continue criticizing ANYONE for their self-righteous stance on keeping the morse code test.

It is a political issue. Criticism of opponents on political matters is very much the American Way.

But, we have to wonder if you are really an American, Jimmy. You want YOUR way all the time (very imperial, royal, dictatorial). You've never served your country in the military or in the government and seem to think having the personal HOBBY of amateur radio is a "service to the nation."

According to a note on Kees Talen's (K5BCQ?) HBR page, you "lent it to your brother" then disassembled it in 1976.
Yes, compared to all the other examples there, your "really good receiver" (built over three decades ago)
certainly looked cheap. Not "inexpensive," cheap.

>want to give but never take - criticize but never be criticized - Tsk, tsk, Jimmy. I am "criticized" (call it others trying to burn me at the stake and worse) all the time. It's the nature of the pro-code beasts. :-)

Mother Superior, put away that ruler. You can't spank anyone with it. Get a better habit, Mother, you are angry all the time now. Tsk.

>Well, that leaves me out. I'm not angry or frustrated about not being

You do nothing. There's no such thing as "more of nothing."
Ergo, "advancement" into doing more nothing is still nothing.

>I'm not even angry at you.

Awwww... Hey, if you really have such sympathy, feel free to send me a monetary grant! I've never gotten one. Free money would be nice!

>And your postings speak for themselves.

They don't "speak," Jimmy. No audio connected with them.

Do you need an Audiobook to help you? Get that grant money together, those Audiobooks aren't free.

>What they say isn't very nice.

Ain't that somethin' though! I don't follow the Church of St. Hiram's teachings (read brainwashing) and I am against the code test for an amateur radio license. Neither do I accept the smug, arrogant, illogical, invalid, dictatorial denigrations of others which the amateur extra morsemen babble in here. Now what you do, Jimmy?

>Nope. I'm not afraid at all. The ROI of telling you personal >information is all negative. Why should anyone do that?

If they have the courage, they can. You don't.

>You get really mad when someone brings up things you wrote in the past, >and then verifies them with links and actual quotes.

I get "mad?" Hell, no. I get IRRITATED is all. You have some kind of perverse "need" to constantly re-argue and re-argue and re-argue and re-argue and re-argue old, old, old threads. Ist du verruct so much that you think you can "win" some old argument you definitely LOST?

>I didn't say all your paychecks were taxpayer subsidized, Len.

Neither did you say part of mine were... :-)

Wow, Jimmy, you are reaching so far in rationalization of your "correctness" you've fallen off the edge of reason!

Jimmy, try TRY to be a good sport about these postings.
Sometimes YOU lose them. Be gracious and accept the losing. Try not to rationalize (beyond reasoning) that you "won" them when you didn't. Let them be.

I agree in principle; we can work out the details later. What we obtain too cheaply we do not value highly. Keep the standards high.
Put some teeth back in ham tests. That tends to weed out those who aren't serious. While not a panacea it would go a long way toward cleaning up a lot of the dreck we now deal with on a daily basis.

As a reader and frequent contributor to the rec.radio.amateur.antenna newsgroup, I see a large and increasing volume of messages cross posted to a large handful of groups which have nothing to do with antennas. Not surprisingly, I don't see any of the regular contributors to this newsgroup participating in the endless arguments about Morse code, testing requirements, and what it takes to be a "real" amateur. These threads seem to be increasing in number daily, involving the same participants, and have grown to the point that the signal-to-noise ratio of rec.radio.amateur.antenna newsgroup is getting seriously degraded. It's becoming necessary to fish through multiple off-topic threads to find the postings involving antennas.

There's no point in including rec.radio.amateur.antenna in the list of newsgroups you send these postings to. There are certainly groups whose readers are much more interested in participating or reading about these topics.

So my request is: Please don't include rec.radio.amateur.antenna in the list of newsgroups you send the original posting to. And when replying to a thread whose topic doesn't involve antennas, simply delete rec.radio.amateur.antenna from the list of newsgroups receiving the reply, before clicking "Send". This won't detract in any way from your discussions, and will be a relief for rec.radio.amateur.antenna readers and participants.

Thanks and 73,
Roy Lewallen, W7EL

Len, I just read a post by Roy from the antenna group. Seems one (or more) of the jokesters has added rec.radio.antenna to the crosspost list.

Absolutely not. Back in the 70s we would discuss antennas, circuitry, the pros and cons of certain radios, cars, boats, guns, and such. Occasionally we would discuss more esoteric things like philosophy and history (conspiracy theories were always a favorite). We kept away from politics and religion, mostly, except we would discuss them in general terms.

Come to think of it, HF was the same. These days, it's hardly worth turning the radio on most of the time.

> Allowing no-codes on VHF & UHF has made discussions less technical and

That might be an oversimplification but it's generally accurate. Like I said earlier, what we obtain too cheaply we do not value highly.

Too many of us forget that if we weren't a resource we would be legislated out of existence.

I think any hero I'd choose would realize that Shinola hasn't been produced in decades. It is as defunct as "ham radio" magazine.

So you'll understand if you are criticized for your self-righteous stance on abolishing the morse code test. After all, you have no stake in amateur radio.

Are you questioning his citizenship, patriotism or both, Len? Who is Tell us about the receivers you've built at home, Len. I'm sure that a exotic in your home workshop.

Is it your opinion that those who you view as delivering "smug,

You've claimed a several decades interest in amateur radio. You've posted here for better than a decade. To date you have no amateur radio license of any class. Better go easy on that "all talk and NO action"

Don't sweat it, Mark. Davie is just a frustrated feldwebel standing

He's an amateur "Sgt Shultz" in a comedy of his own making.

Davie ought to get with his buddie, "Major" Dud, learn what I thought those "snappy" outfits looked apropro considering the fantastic speed of manual morsemanship...a throwback to the old days before teleprinters laid 'em all off.

Those sleeve garters could be snapped, of course.

But...dere com de judge, dere com de judge Jimmy, slavering on about an old entertainment thing on the Tonight show. :-)

Just the thing to set modern communications in full-steam RETROGRADE mode and manual morsemen...and the errors they introduced into vital telegrams which resulted in many lawsuits. ARRL no want us to hear about lawsuits. (dey nebbah hoppen say Newington)

I'd like to see a REAL contest. One where snappy-dressed 1890's dressing morsemen or even 1930's dressing morsemen compete with a 60 WPM typist on an old Teletype. Of course, we wouldn't see that since that's a setup "against manual morse" and thus "not in favor of the 'spirit' and 'tradition' of olde-tyme amateur radio." :-)

Wonder if Leno's studio set had a spitoon and a horse tethered outside the door? That would have made the setting nice and retro...

Sure!

I guess that you were not around during the heyday of the 14.313 and 75 Meter Jamming Wars of the late 70's and 80's.

ALL of the QRM'ers involved had a General or better and in those days you had to pass a 13 WPM code test to even GET ON the HF spectrum.

Your argument is as pointless as your ball-shaped fart head.

Ernie is not known for coming up with anything other than lies. `His` snake oil hair loss method (that does not work) is not even his. It has been proven that he stole the worthless scam from someone in the U.K.

No, Morkie...

YOU are the reason the NG is in the condition it is in.

YOUR crossposting to non-germane NG's which caught the attention of the flamers and "kooks", Morkie.

Besisdes, if it were "my fault", the NG would return to normal on those occassions wherein work has kept me away.

It doesn't.

However I note that the FIRST post I saw in the NG this morning was
YOU evoking the memory of my deceased daughter again.

Strange that since I hadn't posted to the NG in over a week.

No one except YOU has been "libeling" the Armed Forces, Morkie.

Try that in English, fatboy.

Uhhhhh...Morkie....YOU are not a Veteran of the Armed Forces.

Secondly, any comments made in this forum about anyone else were NOT made under the color of authority of membership in ANY organization. Your LAME attempt to redirect to an organization I belong to is just that...LAME!

> Fact an Army officer would be displined if he ahd comitted the acts

Uh....No, they wouldn't. There's not been anything here that >>>I<<< have said that is punishable by civil OR military rule of law.

When will YOU "paolize" for speaking for them, Morkie?

You sent me a threatening E MAIL stating you were allegedly the AGENT for your ALLEGED father-in-law, yet you have failed to produce the Power-of-Attorney for him!

In otherwords, YOU COMMITED FELONY IDENTITY THEFT!

Idiot!

Before one can be published in an (American) Amateur (or any other subject matter forum) one must possess certain requisite skills in English comprehension.

Morkie does not possess THOSE skills either.

Ah yes - the classic "feldwebel post", a clear example of Len's idea of how to debate an issue:

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.policy/msg/64514cd48c14fbb1?dmode=source&hl=en

Besides telling K8MN to "shut the hell up", Len accuses the ARRL of being geographically biased. Len states that most of the radio amateurs In the USA live west of the Mississippi River.

However, later in the same thread, Dennis Ferguson points out that most of the licensed amateurs in the USA live east of the Mississippi.

Len, of course, never admits he made that mistake.

Checking the most current numbers of individuals holding current FCC-issued amateur radio licenses, we find that no more than 315,704 live west of the Mississippi and no less than 340,585 live east of the Mississippi. Total is 656,289 as of September 18, 2006. That's 48.1% west and 51.9% east. So Len was wrong then and is still wrong now.

In tallying those numbers, I counted all amateurs in Minnesota and Louisiana, or with unspecified location as living west of the Mississippi, but the majority are still to the east of the Mississippi.

What was particularly cute about that is that Lennie blew his top and got all his attributes wrong...Not that he'd ever let anything like facts and accuracy get in the way of one of his rants.

out the facts.

Ya KNOW that's got to hurt out there in Sin City!

Nope. It's proven false by your refusal to post a photo proving otherwise.

My request is: Please learn about kill files, and please learn how to take action yourself by killing all posts crossposted to groups other than rec.radio.amateur.antenna. You'll have a much greater chance of changing yourself than you will of getting everyone else to do your bidding, and you'll be a whole lot less frustrated once you do figure that simple task out.

I have a theory about hams who can't even master a news reader, but I'll leave that discussion for another thread.

Chris, we don't mind using the filters. The problem is they (you) are changing the subject every single day so we are constantly making new kill filters. THATS the problem.

No, YOU are the problem. A proper kill filter will kill all crossposts, no matter what the identity of the poster may be. If you really knew how to use a kill filter (and you obviously don't), morphing posters would present no problem at all.

You also top post, and that makes it obvious that you have a lot yet to learn about Usenet.

Since you're not Wiseman, you have no idea of what he looks like. But the people who DO know what he looks like say that IS his photo, and they've been mocking it for years at

You should make sure that you have a proper news reader and then configure it as has been outlined in the news.answers FAQs for the last 20 years or so. If Thunderbird won't cut the mustard, then you should drop it in in favor of one of the other three or four free newsreaders which can do the job.

Usenet users should take responsibility for their own environment and stop asking others to do it for them. Too many people have a cheesy newsreader (such as Google Groups) and are too lazy to find a good one. They are often the people who complain the most loudly about crossposts instead of doing something about it themselves.

(Hint: People using newsreaders which can filter on the Newsgroups header should develop a filter which uses that header. If an article is crossposted, there will be at least one comma in that header. To kill all crossposted articles, kill all articles with a comma in the Newsgroups header. You can also use the Xref header to do the same thing by searching for two or more colons.)

Since when is discussion of amateur radio rules and regulations, including enforcement actions, considered off-topic for this newsgroup?

I fear that it may just feed the trolls, as well as open myself up to further retaliatory forgeries, to spell out the obvious, but here goes...

With respect to the previous question about "Who cares?" I, and many others, care about protecting public resources like radio spectrum. I, and many others, are greatly concerned that public safety officials and auxiliary volunteers are able to do their jobs, and make use of vital tools like communications equipment, without interference. The individual being sentenced was a persistent, serious, repeat offender who targeted both amateur and professional radio frequencies, likely with a drug or alcohol problem considering the judge's order for him to enter rehab. Taking a radio microphone out of his hands for at least another 7 years should be good news to any serious, law-abiding, radio amateur, as well as any other concerned citizen.

And on 16 May 1999, the love of my life, My Precious Taelor, died in her sleep. Taelor was my third daughter and was born with severe birth defects and expected to not live past age two. I kept her for five years, eleven months, three weeks and one day. " from K4yz Bio on QRZ

frankly that sounds rather strange and vaguely sickening but after Steve instance on label other pedophiles one does have to that he listed his dead daughter (the 3rd) as the love of his life, not his current wife

and stve will go and and about it butI took his statement and simply aplied the sort of twist he does then we watch him dance

Jack, it is really wishful thinking to believe you can get everyone else to trim their newsgroups just so that you can have a less stressful Usenet experience while using Outlook Express to read alt.radio.scanner.

Have you ever thought about taking control yourself? The way you do that is to use something better than OE, or else add something to OE which can simply kill the unwanted crossposts. Then poof: All the annoying posts go away, and you don't have to develop hypertension over them.

Try http://www.nfilter.org/ and download the <gasp> free Nfilter program. Put it in series that thing called OE, and filter out all posts which contain a comma in their newsgroups header. After that, all of the evil crossposts will disappear.

Of course, you have to be able to read and follow instructions -- something that the denizens of rec.radio.amateur.misc and .policy are mostly incapable of doing, so that gives you a huge advantage over them.

Use the Nfilter, Jack, and enjoy normal blood pressure again.

(And now, we return you to the sewer talk currently in progress ...)

"The feminist agenda is not about equal rights for women. It is about a socialist, anti-family political movement that encourages women to leave their husbands, kill their children, practice witchcraft, destroy capitalism and become lesbians." -- Pat Robertson

The sociopaths have run rrap, starting when Roger showed up. If you take anything serious here, you need to change your way of thinking. Roger changes things. Wherever he shows up on the net, the parade of societal misfits is not far behind him. If you want a near perfect model of how to deal with the fruits & nuts here, you have no furter to look than Dave Heil. Anyone who is a regular reader here knows the depraved filth that Roger has hurled at Dave Heil & his xyl. Watch how Dave responds, that is when he choses to respond to Roger. Better yet, if you can't stand the heat, get out of the kitchen and turn off rrap. No one should let the crap here get to you, especially vanilla comments like "who cares." You must have an awful thin skin Paul.

That really is a true statement. Just as true as saying, "learning code is difficult.", or "learning code is impossible".

It depends on the person doing or trying to learn the code. For some it's easy, for some it's nigh onto impossible and for most of us it's some where in between. One thing it does take is dedication and an open mind. If you think it's going to be difficult, it will be. If OTOH you think it's going to be easy you might be disappointed...and maybe not. A positive attitude will certainly makes it as easy as possible for the individual while a negative attitude can make it nigh onto impossible.

For me, memorization is easy. That means it took me very little time to make the 5 wpm required for the Novice license back in "those days" OTOH It seems like it took forever to make the 13 wpm including one blown test in Grand Rapids. It took me a lot of hours to finally make the 13. Moving from 13 to 20 was one whale of a lot easier than moving from 5 to 13. I'd not call it easy or difficult,, but it did take a lot of time. When working in the basement I'd almost always have a receiver running in the background with some stations running a bit faster than I could copy. Bout drove my "First" wife nuts. Then one day I discovered it was like listening to a regular conversation.

It usually takes between 30 and 60 hours of consistent practice to make it from 5 to 13 and about another 30 to 60 hours to make 20.

As the fastest speed now at 5 wpm is basically memorization it just takes consistent practice with a dedication to doing it. Some are going to do it in 4 or 5 hours and some are going to take 20 or 30. But when memorizing, memorize the sounds not the dots and dashes.

Like learning to become a pilot, some solo in 10 hours and some take 50 or 60. Every one is different.

"Feldwebel:" Old German Army term for a 'field officer,' generally any NCO.

"Feldhernhugel:" Older German Army term for any small field elevation from which a feldwebel can observe a field of operations. 'Feldhern' (or maybe 'feldhernn?' since my German is rusty) refers to any field officer and 'hugel' is a small hill, can even be a created mound.

Not being a veteran of the Waffen SS, I'm sure that such identification is a sore point with those trying to hide in the USA under new identities. [see this morning's news about a "nice old lady" in her 80s who was once a guard at Ragensbruck concentration camp during WW2]

BTW, Jimmy, another Len taught me those terms (surname Deighton) and I looked them up. Had to, my training was in the US Army. Which branch did you serve in, Jimmy?

>Besides telling K8MN to "shut the hell up", Len accuses the ARRL of >being geographically biased.

Oh, heavens! How could I be so crass? ACCUSE THE ARRL
OF 'BIAS?' How terrible! A sin unto God! Oh, oh, oh!

The ARRL is biased. "Class C" you might say, all the "conduction" being "CW mode" with all other modes "cut off" in the rules of engagement of their publications.
"Efficiency." :-)

Oh, and NOBODY can tell Herr Heil to "shut up." Not even when he tries to silence others in here. <shrug>

>Len states that most of the radio amateurs
>In the USA live west of the Mississippi River.

Oh! Oh! Oh!

So...never mind that the US Census Bureau put the Center of Population of the USA west of the big Mississippi.

>However, later in the same thread, Dennis Ferguson points out that most >of the licensed amateurs in the USA live east of the Mississippi.

Wow! "Mistake!" Yes, and Mike Deignan "lived in Hawaii" according to the FCC database at the time...remember Deignan, Jimmy? He also had all those "club calls"...

HAAAAAAAAAA!!!!!!!!

Tsk, a very old thread in here, argued many times. Years ago. But, Jimmy is still trying to revive the horse so he can beat it over and over and over and over again...

>Len, of course, never admits he made that mistake.

No more than Jimmy Nojob admits he is wrong... :-)

>Checking the most current numbers of individuals holding current

Oh! Oh! Oh! Sound the hue and cry!

Prepare the stake for burning a Heretic who "all the time makes mistakes!"

Call for ETHNIC PURITY in the newsgroup! Banish all no-coders! Keep the group CLEAN for the beloved use of manual radiotelegraphy! :-)

If a single no-code-test advocate makes a "mistake," banish them from this group for life! Ethnic cleansing!

There is only ONE "correct" way, that of the pro-coder!

>In tallying those numbers, I counted all amateurs in Minnesota and >Louisiana, or with unspecified location as living west of the >Mississippi, but the majority are still to the east of the Mississippi.

Wow! PRECISION in numbers! [at least according to Jimmy]

Tsk, you FORGOT something, Jimmy. You should have added your macro paragraph about "the FCC lumping all the Techs into one Tech class category after mid-2000." How could you possibly forget that? Especially since SOME of them are already code-tested...and therefore in the purity and sanctity of "real" radio amateurs who "know code!"

There's plenty of Old Horses lying dead in the archives, Jimmy. I'm sure you won't run out of them in the near future. You can re-argue and re-argue and re-argue and re-argue and re-argue until Antarctica melts. [maybe you might 'win' an old argument for once?] Now that seems like all that the pro-coders do, drag out the old dead horses to beat, once again. They love all that beating off, do they? Tsk, and all your crying about "no violence" in here! HYPOCRITE.

Hey Chris, It sounds like you are one of the jerkoffs posting this crap if you are defending them. Anyone with a little common sense knows this crap posting is wrong and needs to be taken elsewhere. Why should I have to add filters every day to get rid of it. The people involved are obviosly too chicken shit to settle it face to face. So dont be defending them because everyone that is reading this knows its wrong and we want to see it stop.

Since when is politely stating an obvious, face-value, and factual rebuttal considered having an "awful thin skin?" I had an opinion on the subject, intended mostly as an amplification of N2EY's comments, and chose to express it. Addressing my comments to a wider audience, not just the trolls, seemed appropriate.

I take the subjects of amateur radio and amateur radio policy seriously. The fact that others do not should not be viewed as a poor reflection on me. Furthermore, no one should have to remain silent just to meet some arbitrary standard of newsgroup righteousness.

I know Dave Heil. I respect Dave Heil. I don't need to be a clone of Dave Heil to express an opinion in this forum. Nor does he need to be a clone of me.

(I would hope that Dave Heil would agree with me on this.)

Your problem is obvious & easily solved. Bend over, firmly grasp your shoulders, pull firmly until a loud "pop" sound is heard, now stand up straight, your problem is repaired.
It was obvious to everyone else but you that your head was stuck up your ass.
